

- Ind. - Yet they think it is the Simiquos and Saugehamochs.
 - The Simiquos do not use to come down that way where those men were killed it cannot be them
 Ind. - The Indians say they go many times down from Petapico in Canoes.

Please to Note that there may be some mistake in the English Men's names, yet I am for one that lived formerly in Savam and another in Road River to take the best certainly I could from the Indian Description of them. Murren lived at Head South River, thirty Rigely upon the Ridge, the rest were the Head of Savam.

The Examination of William Gros: the 7th Aug: 1691;

The Examinant saith that going over the Bay upon the 13th of June last he saw Robin Hood and other Indians going to John Watkins, and about 3 or 4 days after he the Examinant went to William Richardson where he found Robin Hood continuing ^{with} him about the good use of a Matchcoat offered to him for a Canoe he had made there; and that he this Examinant going over the Bay on Friday about the 20th of July went to John Watkins's and there fell into discourse that for all on the Eastern shore suspected Robin Hood and his Indians to have committed the murder below, to whom John Watkins replied that could not well be, for they had been making Canoes amongst his neighbors and went a hunting to the Head of Savam until the English men hearing the news of men killed below, bid them to go home, so that they came to his house, and he not entertaining them they said they would go to Herring Creek and would come back again, but he never saw them a fiver.
