

Brig came and received for Answer that she came from the Mount that Captain Mulhore coming up out of the Cabbin a few Minutes afterwards gave Keys to the Deponent and ordered him and the other three to carry them to any one of his People who were on Board the Schooner and bid such Person take out of the little Trunk which was in the Chest and send him the said Captain his Commission, that the Deponent returning accordingly to the Schooner handed up the Keys to one of the People that were on the Deck but to which of them he does not remember, communicating to said Person at the same Time Captain Mulhore's Order relative to the Commission, that about a Quarter of an Hour afterwards the Person to whom he had delivered the Keys, returned to him with the Commission rolled up in a Silk Handkerchief, but whether the Keys were also returned to him he does not remember, that as soon as the Commission had been handed down to him he and his three Comrades put off their Boat and rowed back to the Brig which he imagines was at that Time about two hundred Yards from the Schooner, that Captain Mulhore as soon as the Deponent had delivered him the Commission went down again with the Master of the Brig into her Cabbin where they two remained about half an Hour, that then Captain Mulhore coming up out of the Cabbin went into the Boat and returned to his own Vessel, that immediately afterwards sent his Boat back for the Master of the Brig ordering the Boat's Crew to tell him that he must bring his Papers with him, that the said Master came accordingly on Board the Schooner and went into her Cabbin with Captain Mulhore and his Mate Thomas Dale, that about Half an Hour afterwards Captain Mulhore ordered two of his People to go on Board the Brig and fetch the three outlandish Men that as soon as the Boat got alongside of the Brig the Deponent saw all the Brig's People jump into the Boat many of them if not all, taking their spare Coats with them and that they the Brig's People then came on Board the Schooner, and that soon afterwards Captain Mulhore ordered his Mate and four Hands of which the Deponent was one to go on Board the Brig to take care of her which they accordingly did and having got on Board fastened the Schooner's Boat by a Painter to the Brig's main Chains, that about half an Hour afterwards the Boat broke loose whereupon the Schooner bore away in Order to take it up, and soon after the Brig's People had secured the Boat to the Schooner the Deponent saw the Schooner's Soudant hauled down and a Whiff hoisted at which Signal Captain Mulhore's Mate who had Charge of the Vessel shortened Sail and then the Schooner running up to the windward of the Brig came to an Anchor, and the Brig's People jumping immediately into the Boat returned on Board the Brig and took Possession of her forbidding Captain Mulhore's Mate and four Men to stir, threatening that if they did or attempted to get into the Boat they would cut them down thro' of them having
