By a transcript from the Proceedings of Prince Georges County Court accompanied by a Representation of the Court of the said County it appears that James Huddleston was presented at September Term 1798 for selling spirituous liquors without license and was fined the sum of six pounds. The Court represent that the said James is a foreigner. That there was not sufficient evidence at the trial to convict him, but he voluntarily declared that he had sold spirituous liquors. That he came to Court with intention to tell the truth. That having obtained license from the Commissioners of the City of Washington he thought he had complied with the Law. They therefore recommend a Remission of the same.
