

may be warned in time, and that you may be prepared to take immediate and effective measures against it. Such an attempt could only have the most deplorable consequences, and it would be as agreeable to the President as it would be to yourself that it should be prevented, or overcome by the loyal authorities and citizens of Maryland, rather than averted by any other means.

I am very respectfully yours &

Secretary of War,

Executive Chamber
Annapolis April 20th 1861

Hon. S. Cameron
Sir:

Since I saw you in Washington last, I have been in Baltimore City, laboring in conjunction with the Mayor of that City to preserve peace and order, but I regret to say with little success. Up to yesterday there appeared promise, but the outbreak at Faneuil Hall, the turbulent passions of the riotous element prevailed, fear for safety became reality, what they had endeavored to conceal, but what was known to us was no longer concealed but made manifest; the rebellious element had the control of things. We were arranging and organizing forces to protect the city and preserve order, but want of organization, of arms, prevented success. They had arms, they had the principal part of the organized military forces with them, and for us to have made the effort under the circumstances, would have had the effect to aid the disorderly element. They took possession of the armories, have the arms and ammunition, and I therefore think it prudent to decline (for the present) responding affirmatively to the requisition made by President Lincoln, for four regiments of infantry.

With great respect I am your obt. servt
