The foregoing statement it is to be remarked, relates only to the counties of the State of New York, while the city and Albany, in addition, have upwards of sixty thousand children between the age of 5 and 15; the most of which are also taught in primary schools, although it has been said that the administration has not been as faithfully conducted within the cities, as throughout the counties of that state.

This unprecedented success is the highest reward and gratification to the benefactor of that state, who gave 'form and comeliness' to their system.
