

Road Company—and other less subscriptions to minor works—as an easy and effectual means of procuring said subscriptions? And if your answer be in the affirmative, then name said member of the Assembly, and state generally, the conversation that passed in said interview.

Did, or did not any delegate from Worcester county propose to you at December session 1835, of the General Assembly of Maryland, to advise the passage of an act to create a Real Estate Bank to be established in that county—to which an appropriation should be confided by the State, to be applied to the construction of a canal from the Pocomoke river to Annamessex river, and the surplus, if any, to improvement of the navigation of the Pocomoke river—and signify to you his willingness if such appropriation should be made, to advocate the subscription proposed to be made to the capital stock of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company, and to that of the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road Company, and other subscriptions—and if your answer be in the affirmative, then name that delegate; and state generally, what passed at said interview.
