

dering it advisable that he should sell the Bonds when the company required money, large advances were from time to time made by or through him for the repayment of which the Bonds in his hands were of course liable, and the proceeds thereof were applied to such purpose as far as necessary when they were disposed of.