

It may be necessary to remark that it was mutually agreed upon by the Commissioners, that the City and County retain all the moveable personal property now in the offices, respectively occupied by them and although not strictly within the bounds of the duty prescribed your Commissioners, they cannot in view of the necessary delay attendant upon the erection of suitable buildings for the use of the County, close this report without urging the suggestion that the same accommodation that has hitherto been mutually enjoyed, be continued and extended to the County for a period, at least sufficient to enable the County Commissioners to provide such buildings as their necessities may require. The justice of this becomes more strongly apparent, in view of the recent large expenditures in refitting, and of which the County has paid the one-half part.

Witness our hands and seals this seventh day of January 1853.
