The senate met. Brice Thomas B. Worthington, Esq; appeared in the senate.

The petition of sundry inhabitants of Queen-Anne's county, on behalf of a clergyman employed in Christ-Church parish in said county, was read, referred to the consideration of the house of delegates, and sent by Richard Barnes; Esq;

The following is entered on the journal at the request of Mr. Chase, though not admitted thereby to be a just and full state.

ON the seventeenth day of last March, I was summoned to appear in the senate to give information respecting a declaration by me, "That there were tories in the senate." I waited on the senate, and informed them, that I did not think they had any power to require my appearance before them, to examine into the misconduct of any of their body, because by the constitution they had no power of expulsion, which was only given to the house of delegates under a restriction to be exercised only once for the same offence. I declared that I never had said there were traitors in the senate, but I would mention what I had said if it was desired.

Mr. Filghman and Mr. Carroll immediately asked me, if I had said, that they or either of them had applied to general Howe for protection? To this question I answered, that I never had said so. I then repeated, that if I was desired, I would relate every thing I had said. Being desired to relate what I said, and to disclose all I knew relative to the conduct of any of the senate,
