collection and developing the classed arrangement. has rendered an invaluable service by making an inventory of the to the unfolding of this project. Miss Adelaide R. Hasse, however, Space does not permit the mention of all who have contributed

For the cooperation of the many libraries and archives both public and private which almost without exception in the nation have freely given access to their holdings,

To the legion of fellow searchers who have offered encouragement, stimulation and guidance, For the vision and support of the sponsors and the administrators who have provided the ways and means,

For the devotion of those helpers who endured the rigors and hardships attendant on itinerant microphotography,

And for the loyalty of the editorial staff, and acknowledgment that a common impulse may dedicate these microfilms to the spirit of American scholarship. To the host of contributors the Director makes grateful

WILLIAM SUMNER JENKINS

Library of Congress May 17, 1949