

At the reading of the title of the Bill for trade with the Indians one of the Gentlemen objected against it that it was a fore recited the Secretary replied that it was a new Bill though the former title and that the house could not Judge whether it were to be read upon or no afore they heard it read the Gentleman objected that it was against the Form & Order the Secretary replied that the Order spoke of utterly rejecting a Bill but this was not utterly rejected by the house in regard divers a part of it was therefore it could not be put to the house to vote the passing of it till the third reading and accordingly with the Consent of the House the Secretary proceeded to read it as the first time of Reading the Gentleman interrupted and desired first to read some Propositions to the house touching the Bill but it was adjudged that the Bill should first be read & then he might object what he pleased so the Bill was read
