In answer to a Paper from the Lower House Rec<sup>d</sup> of June touching the Bill Entituled an act of Attainder - His Lordsh<sup>ps</sup> and this House doe conceive it not safe for them to vote the Killing of the five or six Susquehannoughs Embarked nor Murderers, for to them and all the world it does and will certainly appear the greatest that ever hath been committed.

That the unanimous consent of the Virginians (if true) does not ways alter the Nature of the Crime, nor since the said Truman has Instructions plain enough to have made him abhorred and abominated, doe black an Action Can as little serve for an extenuation thereof; And whereas in the said Paper for a further extenuation it is signified, that the Major to prevent a mutiny of the whole Army was Compell'd and drawn to the Action,

This House are of a nother opinion, for at the said Trumans Trial did too plainly appear of his first Commands for the Killing of those Indians was not obey'd and if he had some difficulty to get his men to obey him therein, and that after they were put to death not a man would come to have had a hand in it but rather been
