

Second the truth of their allegations are called in Question, and which they cannot with Convenience appear their to prove. And if when such Magistrates from the Legislature here to assist in the regulation of such practices by punishing those who are the most notorious offenders in this sort — and that neither Court nor Country can be trusted with judging of the of one such attorney, it must be necessarily concluded (with all humble submission to be spoken) such a Constitution cannot deserve the Charge of its Support.

But we hope for better things and if we shall not be Denied the power of Discouraging a person (who tho' he may be a barrister at Law) yet only acts as an attorney here and who has been Generally troublesome to the whole Province) by such like ways & means as every Inferior Court has right to do, with any attorney that misbehaves himself before them.

And we cannot think the thing sufficiently if the person that have been so remarkable an Instance at that Law mentions shall be able to Justify his ill Conduct in Displeasure of the Government and Country.

We think therefore in pursuance of their Lordships Recommendation Endeavour (as we think it our undoubted duty) to make such provision by a general Law to support the Magistrates in the administration of Justice as may be sufficient for that end, and shall avoid of Imputation of tacking by proposing a particular Law for the like support against the particular offenders who (may not be liable to the Exception you Excey) is pleased to mention, However private Gent. may have been abused by the partial clamours of the papists, yet we are well satisfied whoever give themselves leave to enquire into the truth of their allegations and Grounds of their Complaints will join with us in the asserting the truth of your Excellency's Declaration, and be astonished at their monstrous Superstructure.

The Laws of Great Brittain deny them even here the liberties they have hitherto enjoyed they have abused these liberties with impunity and yet Complain against the Justice and of your Excey's Administration for no other Cause that we know of But opposing their advances towards the prime offices of trust in this Province;

We take this to be Indulgence tho' they ungratefully term it a prosecution and begg leave to joyn with your Excellency in desiring them to shew one single instance of severity from either Government or Country and rejoice to find their Lordships are so well apprized of the truth of the case as to judge their proceedings Malicious and Imprudent.

We are glad to find that some (who we doubt not are the most Judicious and considerable of that part) have not joyned with the
