

VOTES AND PROCEEDINGS, November, 1798.

“Accept then, Sir, our assurances, that the wise and salutary measures of your administration inspire present confidence, and a retrospective view of your long and faithful services, your steady patriotism and well tried integrity, constitute an ample pledge for the future rectitude of your conduct; and, with wishes for your health and happiness, we earnestly hope your usefulness will long be continued to your country.”

It being objected to as not in order, was declared in the affirmative by the speaker; upon an appeal to the house, from the decision of the speaker, and the yeas and nays required, they appeared as follow:
