By the S E N A T E, June 7, 1809.

Gentlemen of the House of Delegates,

CONCEIVING that the mode of electing senators to represent this state in the senate of the United States has been fully established by the uniform practice heretofore invariably adopted by the general assembly, which mode is not only sanctioned by reason, convenience, and a strict regard to the rights of the people, delegated to their immediate representatives, but is also suggested and established by the adoption of the same principle in every clause of our constitution, or act of assembly, where an election is to be made by both branches of the legislature, the senate have declined acceding to your proposition for the appointment of a committee of conference until the house of delegates shall have agreed or disagreed to the mode of election already proposed to them by the senate. As yet the senate know of no disagreement on the subject between the two branches of the legislature on which a committee of conference should be called upon to act.
