By the Senate,

February 23d 1831.

Gentlemen of the House of Delegates.

The senate in compliance with the request of your honourable body, have reconsidered the bill, entitled, A supplement to the act for the better regulation of apprentices, and have again rejected it. The senate believe upon mature consideration, that allowing appeals from the orphans courts to the county courts in cases of disputes between masters and apprentices would not lessen but rather increase the delay and inconvenience said to exist now, and would moreover produce an accumulation of costs, which the persons incurring them would be little able to bear.

By the Senate,

February 23, 1831.

Gentlemen of the House of Delegates,

Your amendments of the amendments of the bill, entitled, An act to restrain attorneys and solicitors in chancery from entering their appearance to any suit, bill, or action at law or in equity, in the courts of this state, without special authority, have received from the senate respectful consideration, and we regret to say we cannot accede thereto. We return the bill and amendments, hoping your house will concur in the amendments proposed by us.

By order,

L. Gassaway, Clk.

Also delivered a bill, originated in and passed by the senate, entitled, An act to prevent unnecessary expense and delay in prosecuting appeals from courts exercising equity jurisdiction in this state; also the bill, entitled, An additional supplement to the act to prevent the unnecessary accumulation of costs in civil suits; which were severally read and referred to the committee on grievances and courts of justice.

And a communication from the executive, enclosing resolutions adopted by the state of Ohio on the subject of the
