Review of a Democratic Document.

Committee has lately issued a sixteen-page pamplilet, entitled "National Finances." Under so comprehensive a title the publie would have a right to expect, from any honest and national organization, an authoritative and reliable statement of the authoritative and reliable statement of the condition and resources of the National Treasury, the nature and extent of taxation, and, at least, a clear statement of the receipts and expenditures of the Government for some designated period.

Nothing of the kind is to be found in this Democratic document, which consists mainly, of a partial but pretended review of a Republican document previously issued under a like title. nder a like title.

Let us examine some of the prominent figures and statements of this Democratic manifesto, and first of all its glaring

We quote:

"$411'255,477 63 spent in the first fiscal year of Grant's administration."

Here is evinced a plain purpose to impress upon the public mind that this sum constitutes the ordinary expenditures by Grant for the period named.

S. E. Corner Ninth and Market Sts. in greater variety than can be found elsewhere, as we make it a specialty.

"Which is $51,344,201 11 more than the whole expenditure of Buchanan's administration and the last year of Pierce's administration added together."

Here is another attempted deception in the title page of this Democratic document. The Resident Committee desires the public to understand that Grant's administration, for one year, has cost the country more than the last five years of Democratic rule, when, in fact, the last year of Grant is cheaper per capita than the last year of Buchanan, and also cheaper per capita than was the Democratic administration of either of the five years with which it is compared by the Democratic Committee.

This is fully answered by the fact that the premium on gold received into the Treasury, from the bondholders or speculators during the same period, was $20,763,331 99, nearly two millions in excess of the premium paid on bonds.

sentations. DIMINUTION OF THE DEBT. Under this head the Resident Committee tyle, cannot be surpassed. Strangers visiting our city are respectfully invited to make only a partial quotation from the Republican document, which shows a re-duction of the debt, under Grant, to July duction of the debt, under Grant, to July 1, 1870, of the sum of $139,069,087 17, wholly ignoring the following:

"By means of the redemption and payment of the one hundred and thirty-nine millions of coin-interest hearing debt, the publicater relieved foreter from an annual tax to the amount of eight millions and one-third of a million of dollars ($8,344,- ing or discount, have swelled to an aggregate of eighty-three millions in ten years to one hundred and sixty-seven millions in teenty years, and two hundred and fifty millions of taxation in thirty years.

This relief is permanent. Most of the other propositions which have been, from time to time, promulgated for relieving the people from taxation are but temporary expedients, that tend, in fact, merely to prolong the period and augment the ag-

They, however, deliver a moral fecture against excessive taxation, in which they forget to mention that every dollar of taxation levied by the Republican party has been forced upon the country by the Democratic rebellion.

But under this head the Democratic Committee pretend to quote from a speech of Secretary Boutwell, made in the House of Representatives July 21, 1869; but the extract is so unfairly garbled by the Democrotic Committee that we have deemed it better to refer to the Congressional Globe for his exact words, which were as follows:

"I wish to call the attention of the House to a fact deduced by careful examination of statistics obtained from the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, showing that during the last three years we have with our resources and the revenue of this country secured a large diminution of the public debt. I confess that, after the careful examination I had made, I felt compelled to review it to see if there was not some mistake in the premises or in the calculation, so astonishing is the evidence thus furnished of the ability of the people of the country to liquidate the public debt. From the 1st day of April, 1865, to the 1st day of April, 1865, to the 1st day of Junuary, 1868, two years and nine months, the late paid out of the public Treasury $1,552,000,000 of money. Upon a careful analysis of the expenditures of the Government during those two years and nine months, I find that the expenses of a peace establishment, excluding interest, pensions, and bounties, upon the basis of the year 1866 and 1867, when the expenses of the Government were $70,000,000 more than they are to be the present year, amounted to $485,000,000, showing that the first false statement to be noticed is the amount stated as the expenditure of the first false statement to be noticed is the amount stated as the expenditure of the first false statement to be noticed in the graph of the country, the interest on Pacific rail-road bonds, and the organization of new Territories.

As to which statement the said Democratic Committee remarks as follows:

"The first false statement to be noticed is the amount stated as the expenditure of the first false statement to be noticed in the first false st some mistake in the premises or in the cal- year at President Grant's administration

Lincoln.

And we readily grant that, but for the fidelity, sagacity, and patriotism of the Republican party, as exhibited in providing for the expenses of the Democratic awar against the Union, the debt would have amounted, as stated by Mr. Boutwell, to $3,432,000,000 at the date named; and that, in consequence, the public credit would have been so shaken as to have depreciated the bonds and currency of the nation to a ruinous extent.

The thanks of the nation are due to the Republican party for this timely protect.

Republican party for this timely protection of the public faith; and, for once, thanks are due to the Democratic committee for squarely admitting that the good work was actually accomplished by the Republican party. REFUNDING THE DEBT.

istration of either of the five years with which it is compared by the Democratic Committee.

Third Quotation.

"Nearly $19,000,000 of premium paid to bondholders in addition to the interest."

This is fully answered by the fact that the premium on gold received into the Treasury, from the bondholders or speculators during the same period, was $20,
The Resident Committee has over a page.

The Resident Committee has over a pag of argument and assertion, by which they endeavor further to distort the facts; but as their premises are shown to be absolutely false, the argument of course falls.

VALUE OF UNITED STATES SECURITIES. VALUE OF UNITED STATES SECURITIES.

The Democratic Resident Committee quotes the Republican finance pamphlet as to the value of United States securities, which they dare not attempt to invalidate or contradict. But they gloat over the fact that the shock of war between the two leading European Powers temporarily depressed American securities, though they are forced to admit that, in a few days, those securities again rallied to about the quotation given by the Republican committee. The temporary depression, however, gave the Democrats much satisfaction, and furnished the only crumb of comfort which they have been able to draw fort which they have been able to draw from public disasters since the commence ment of Grant's administration.

The said Democratic committee quote from the Republican finance pamphlet the following statement entire: EXPENDITURES FOR THE FISCAL YEARS 1859-'60 AND 1869-'70 COMPARED.

Total expenditures for year ending June 30, 1870 - $292,124,052 18 From this expenditure there should be deducted the following items, incurred in Total expenditure for the fiscal year 1869-'70, less items properly chargeable to the rebellion Reduced to a gold basis, for comparison with the ex-penditures of the fiscal year 1859-'60, under a Democratic administration, the average premium of gold for the year 1869-'70 being 23 2-10 per cent., gives as the expenditure, was interest, but because, like the other war expenses specified, it was and is properly chargeable to the Democratic rebellion and to the Democrats as being the only rebels.

expenses paid by Buchanan for the year in question amounted to $63,025, 789 34, and the Treasury books show that he also paid as follows during the same year: Items on old debt - $500 00

Texas creditors - 6,563 38
Public debt - - 14,430,850 00
Trust-funds - - 98,245 67

Mr. Burlingame's success at Pekin will always remain the distinguishing feature of his remarkable career. The eminence he achieved, the influence he exerted, and of less in 1870 than in 1860 upon the same basis, notwithstanding the increased area of the country, the interest on Pacific railing and bonds, and the organization of new Territories.

As to which statement the said Democratic Committee remarks as follows:

"The first false statement to be noticed is the amount stated as the expenditure of the fiscal year 1859-'60: that is, from July 1, 1859, to June 30, 1860, which the Republican Committee allego was $63,025,789 34."

To this table is appended, by the Democratic committee, the follwing pertinent questions:

"Will this Republican committee please inform us how this showing affects the Democratic party?"

"But what had the Democrats to do with the Internal Revenue Bureau?"

ANSWER.

Simply this, gentleman Democrats: The whole system of internal taxation is a Democratic institution, chargeable to the Democratic institution, chargeable to the Democratic party, and made necessary by the Democratic rebellion.

The said Democratic committee next devote a page to a furious assault upon the good old Commonwealth of Massachusetts, which is just as appropriate in a pamphlet upon the "National Finance" as was the panels.

We have now examined all the material points raised in this famous Democratic pamphlet. The arguments and conclusions of the committee, being based upon falso statements as has been shown, are in themselves false, and fall with the pretended facts upon which they are predicted.

Phantom Days.

Sweet-heart, when the year turns back, And over her summer track Goes trailing in robes of mist, And holding her poor pale lips, Chill with their half eclipse, Up to the sun to be kissed—

Then over the parting line The dead days glimmering thine, With pitiful faces fair.

So all the story is told, Cease, for the heart's a-cold, And the winter claims its own. In the first night o' the frost

Yet at the sight I yearn; And O, that they would return With the love I forego! And I murmer, ah! how long? And sorrow takes up her song— "Till the rose blooms in the snow."

For, like the haze on the hill, Lieth on thought and will The spell of a past delight So, over the yellow leaves,
And the empty place of sheaves,
I follow my aimless feet.
Oh! love that is lost to me,
Are there ghosts that walked with thee
In this time o' the bitter-sweet?
