oak, through whose solemn cleft the stained water rolled like a great tawny and polished scrpent. Few boats or houses stood in sight,—only one canoe hollowed out of a long log with a solemn man paddling in it, a glimpae of a sawmill up a deep black creek, some bundles of shingles at a landing, a man poking with a long pair of tongs for oysters, a tattered fish-net stretched between the trees, fish boxes of wickerwork in all the eddies, on one side the bank occasionally acclivitous, on the other scarcely a bank at all, but a cypress jungle.

Such were the phenomena. Now and then a great old mansion of clap-boards, or black-baked bricks loomed up in a clearing, and a woman with n.ked feet was lowering the pole and bucket at the garden well. Rehoboth was an old timber settlement, with an Episcopal Church, said to be the oldest on the Eastern Shore, standing among its graves full of ivy, without a pasamong its graves f
