Democratic Ignorance. It is well known that the Fifteenth Procession, at Cecilton, on Saturday last. Amendment is the greatest Democratic An ox, or cow beast of some sort, was bugaboo of the times, even over-topping spitted and roasted whole, and as many as reliable local correspondence in each Elec-"nigger equality" in the pure unclassified could be got together were formed in a line mind of Democracy. Taking their cue on horse-back, and rodo through and from a knowledge of this weak spot in the around the village, their horses and persons Democratic brain, their shrewd speakers decorated with red and white-no bluend "ward politicians" told their dumb carrying the flag of the United States, work for nothing, we make the following followers, that if they could only manage turned upside down, or "Union down," as liberal proposition: To any lady or gentleto elect a majority of Democrats to Con. the inversion of the national banner is gress they would speedily repeal the obnoxious fifteenth article of the Constitution, and "stop all the niggers from voting" house of Mr. Thomas P. This was delightworked with might and main, and managed at home at the time—with the old Rebel worked with might and main, and managed to reduce the Republican majority in the demoniac yell. Having thus published the character, and be composed wholly of local House to about fifty, (not 13 as the Democrat, with so much assurance affirmed.) We insult to the Government and all its friends, politics or other subjects. Here is a could not have believed that so much this representative procession composed of could not have believed that so much ignorance prevailed among men evincing the F. F.'s of Sassafras Neck, moved on, improve themselves in writing, and at the ignorance prevailed among men evincing and then Mr. Jones' children ran up the such interest in political questions as the that of amending the Constitution.

in the Constitution in the manner above stated, and if repealed at all, it must be done by a similar process; and though the Democrats might gain a majority in both Houses of Congress, of which there is not the remotest probability, they could not even propose the abrogation of the-to them -obnoxious Fifteenth Amendment, unless that majority was a two-thirds one. And admitting them to have gained the power to propose the repeal, their proposition would have to be sanctioned by threefourths of the State Legislatures to give it validity. This can never be accomplished, every man must admit, who knows anything about our Government, and till this rights to every citizen; and colored men well dismiss their vain hopes, and prepare to exercise the principles of liberty which that document secures to themselves and their posterity, without grudging the same privileges and rights to other men, whose exercise of those rights does not in any way interfere with their own.

The Approaching Change. The delightful weather and fine roads we have been enjoying for many weeks, we may expect ere long to change to rough stormy weather, with snow and ice, or drenching storms and muddy roads, making travel on our public thoroughfares, not merely unpleasant, but execrable. The question of bad roads with returning winter, again meets every one with its discomforts and toil, who has business requiring them to be on the roads. A remedy for this growing evil is the all-important question with our people whose business calls them abroad. If the evil cannot be entirely eradicated, every one will admit that it might in a great measure be mitigated; and with the large sums yearly spent on the county roads, they ought to constantly improve, in place of growing worse, as is the case at present.

There is something radically wrong in our system of Road Laws is clear to all reflecting minds; and that unscrupulous men take advantage of the defective law, is equally apparent. There is immense quantities of material in the form of stones we stand most in need of. A law giving the distress in this neighborho roads shall be made, and the material to be used, and then give the contract to the lowest responsible bidder, whose bondsmen

Archbishop Spalding delivered a brief address, during which he said there was no dictinction of color in the Roman Catholic Church, and he rejoiced to see Americans, Germans and found for the home circle and the country Irishmen carrying out, by their action yesterday, the true principles of that church. It is a mooted question, said the Archbishop, whether the colored people of the Roman whether the colored people of the Roman Catholic faith should have seperate churches, or whether they should remain, as now, in the churches in which they enjoy common privileges with all other Catholics. Heretofore they have met at the same communion table, and have participated, he said, in the same sacraments and ordinances of that Church on terms of perfect equality. He thought that perhaps in some localities, by reason of their increasin some localities, by reason of the roman species of mental food within its reach, of good papers full of practical, every day instruction, as well as scientific knowledge, acanot be estimated.
