Cutting and Cooking Food for Stock. In many sections of our country it is a question: "How can we keep our stock to the greatest advantage during our long winters?" We cannot provide the necessary hay, grain, and fodder to keep the amount of stock we would be glad to keep, to provide the necessary animal manure requisite to keep, our farms improving, or hardly to hold their own." Therefore we must try and find some way by which we can increase our capacity for feeding more stock, and at the same time make more and better manure. In no way can this be accomplished except by cutting and steaming their food. their food.

How to Draw Tea.—When you pour boiling water upon the tea, it causes most of the aroma to escape with the steam. First pour tepid or cold water enough on the tea to cover it, place it on the stove-hearth, top of a tea kettle, or any place where it will be warm, but not enough so as to cause the aroma to escape in the steam. Let it remain about half an hour, then pour on boiling water snd bring it to the table.
