The Power of Eloquence. A LECTURE.

We recived a polite invitation from the trustees of the State-street African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church to attend a lecture in that edifice on Thursday evening. Being told that the discourse would be the description of the State would be used to protect the Orange procession, Church to attend be used to protect the Orange procession, Church and the discourse would be used to protect the Orange procession, Church and Chur delivered by a female colored lecturer from if necessary. Under this guarantee of pro-Maryland, curiosity, as well as an interest tection the Orangemen, or Protestant to see how the colored citizens were man- Irish, proceeded with their annual celebraaging their own institutions, led us at once tion, and were attacked by the Ribbonmen, to accept the invitation. We found a very who fired on and killed and wounded sevspacious church, gas-lit and the balus- eral of the troops. Several attacks were trades of the galleries copiously hung with made on the procession and the troops in wreaths and festoons of flowers, and a the course of the afternoon, and were relarge audience of both sexes, which both pulsed by the troops with considerable in appearance and behavior, was respect- slaughter of the mob. The result of the able and decorously observant of the pro- day's fighting sums up 56 killed and 175 pricties of the place. The services were wounded. So much for Democratic govopened, as usual, with prayer and a hymn, ernment in New York. Her voice was remark New York, has brought upon this country. able-as sweet as any woman's voice we ever heard, and so clear and distinct as to pass every syllable to the most distant ear in the house. Without any effort at attentive listening we followed the speaker to the end, not discerning a single grammatical inaccuracy of speech, or the slightest violation of good taste in manner or matter. At times the current of her thoughts flowed in elequent and poetic expression, and often her quaint humor would expose the ivory in half a thousand of open mouths. We confess that we began to wonder, and we asked a fine-looking colored man before us, "what is her color? Is she dark or light?" He answered, "She is mulatto; what they call a red mulatto." The "red" was new to us. Our neighbor asked, "How do you like her?" We replied, "She is giving your people the best kind and the very wisest of advice." He rejoined, "I wish I had her education." To which we added, "That's just what she tells you is your great duty and your need, and if you are too old to get it yourselves, you must give it to your chrildren."

mind that she was not only intelligent and educated, but-the great end of education -she was enlightened. She comprehends perfectly the situation of her people, to whose interests she seems ardently devoted. The main theme of her discourse, the one string to the harmony of which all the others were attuned, was the grand opporothers were attuned, was the grand oppor-tunity that emancipation had afforded to the black race to lift itself to the level of the duties and responsibilities enjoined by the duties and responsibilities enjoined by it. "You have muscle power and brain power," she said; "you must utilize them, or be content to remain forever the inferior race. Get land, every one that can, and as fast as you can. A landless people must be dependent upon the landed people. A few acres to till for food, and a roof, however humble, over your head, are the castle of your independence, and when you have it you are fortified to act and vote independently whenever your interests are at stake." That part of her lecture (and there was much of it) that dwelt on the moral duties and domestic relations of the colored beople was pitched on the highest key of sound moralty. She urged the cultivation of the "home life," the sanctation of the "loude commence and give you a catallogue worse than any that records the crimes of the Paris madmen, but your forty-level, set of pest few Tools, set o power," she said ; "you must utilize them, of the marriage state (a happy constrast to her strong-minded, free-love, white sisters of the North), and the duties of mothers to their daughters. "Why," said she, in lave field from their homes in terror. The a voice of much surprise, "I have actually result is that labor is scarce everywhere, heard since I have been South that somethe cotton and corn fields are suffering for heard since I have been South that sometimes colored husbands positively boat their wives! was educated among Abolitionists before the war, and was a trained and practiced lecturer in the anti-slavery crusade. And yet, to judge from her talk, she is less peaches, that regular peach trains have been running on the Delaware Railroad for bigoted and less embittered to-day than nine-tenths of the white Yankees of that mine-tenths of the white Yankees of that school.

On the whole, we are very glad we accepted the Zion's invitations. It gave us much food for new thought; reminded us, perhaps, of neglected duties to these people, and it impressed strongly on our minds that these people are getting along, getting that these people are getting along, g onward, and progress was a star becoming familiar to their gaze and their desires. Whatever the negroes have done in the paths of advancement, they have done largely without white aid. We say "largely," and yet the white people have helped them to build their churches and to promote the honest in their undertakings mote the honest in their undertakings.
But politics and white pride have kept the white people aloof from offering that earnest and that moral assistance which would be so useful to a people just starting from infancy into a life of self-dependence. The white people have held back from a race wholad given up their political consciences and their suffrage power to strangers and their suffrage power to stranger to notorious enemies of the South, and have p eferred to let them do the work of opening the eyes of the black people to their ing the eyes of the black people to their true relations and interests in society and politics. But for the interloping carpet-part of his head was torn completely off, bagger, who came between the two races and one of his arms broken. He died in to make strife, and to steal and plunder by means of a suborned negro vote, we have brook, living a short distance from Centrenever doubted that happier relations would have existed between the two races since the war ended. That time will yet come. It is hastened a step by the political defeat and consequent departure of every additional one of these evil birds of passage.

Ku-Klux In South Carolina. , A specal correspondent to the Philadelphia Press, from Columbus, S. C., cays ; phia Pres, from Commons, S. C., Lays;

Nows of Ku-Klux outrage, come in thick and fast. The city is filled with refugees driven from their homes, and with the wives and children of murdered lusbands and fathers. Talk of the horrors of the Commune! From what I have learned in the last day or two, I venture the assertion that in the number of its victims—those murdered outright and in cold blood—the Ku-Klux of South Carolins far exceeds the Paris madmen. Language fails to express Paris madmen. Language fails to express the horrible crimes which are occurring every day. Outrages more revolting and cruel than the most diabolical ever concruel than the most diabonical ever con-ceived in France's social agenies are dis-cussed here as every-day occurrances. The Southern white men are becoming as dead to decency and humanity as they are to country and patriotism. All of the outrages occur in the country districts. These next propose to visit.

This is a horrible tale to unfold, but it comes up from those benighted regions continuously. And these things are done in the name and for the purpose of aiding the Democratic party to power-in the hope of earrying those States for a Demoeratic President in 1872. From such a result what might the country not expect? Another correspondent, writing from Spartanburg, July 6th, says:

"More and more horrible. Every day brings to light some fearful crime in this barbarous country against the Itwa not alone of the United States, but of God and for the unmanly practice with, 'Well, I have get to whip her, or leave her.'"—Again the white ivery showed that a chord was struck in the audience. We heard a darkey near us say, "If she will just stay here a few days she will find plenty of them sort of husbands."

There were parts of the lecturer's discourse that grated a little on a white Southern ear, but it was lost and forgiven in the genuine carnestness and profound good sense with which the woman spoke to her kind in words of sound advice. And when we came to consider her education, we had to conclude that the grating passages were comparatively mild. She was educated among Abolitionists before on Monday. RAILROAD & TOPOGRAPHICAL MAP OF MARYLAND. Published by J. 11. Mausfield, Baltimor Published by J. 11. Mansfield, Beltimore.

This Map is the most full, accurate, and desirable of any work of the kind littleric published. It represents in a cheap and convenient form, the State as it is to-day in all its varied interests; all its Italicask, completes and in progress; all its Cities, Towns, Villages, and Post Offices: while, in carefully compiled and arranged statistical columns, are given the Farm, Forest, and Mineral Productions, Manufactures, Connectee, and Population of the State. It is drawn and corpraved in the least style of the art, and handsomely colored and mounted on cloth and rollers.

Size, 25 x 40 indices. Price, 22.
