All these circumstances are in favor of the wheat growers of the older States, and to that of the best Western soils—Lands are never exhausted except by carelessness and improvidence. When of the soil, the what crop in numerous instances has been brought up to forty-five bushels the acre, and the average, except in bad seasons, has rarely fallen below twenty-five. The climate in England especially, is morever, greatly against the farmer, whilst with us it is unexceptionally good. It is, therefore, but fair to say that if we pursue their the pursue their matches and the pursue their matches and the pursue their matches and the pursue the purs methods and lime and fertilize as liberally as they do, that our crops should be at least equal to theirs.

place we must steadily pursue a system of cultivation and a system of manuring which instead of robbing annually the soil of a part of its plant food, should add to it more than has been carried off in the crops. We know by the analyti-cal tables that have been so frequently given in our pages that the essential constituents of a good wheat soil are potash, soda, phosphate of lime, car-bonate of lime and silica. We throw out the silica, for that is superabundantly found in almost every soil. We have then to look principally for potash, soda, phosphate of lime and carbonate of lime. If these are present in good in a good season and under cleanly and thorough preparatory tillage. If these are deficient in quantity, or if any one of them is missing, the crop will be light.

Under such circumstances what is 10 be of them is missing, the cree will be light.

This crop turned under will, in rotting, give to the soil all the constituents that a crop of wheat requires, for strange to say, the constituents of the ash of closer and those of the ash of wheat, both stem and grain, the ash of wheat, both stem and grain, the ash of wheat, both stem and grain, the short was the stranger of the stranger of the school of the short of the short of the school of the short of the short of the short of the school of the short of the shor run parallel with each other. Hence, as every good farmer knows, clover turned under is an excellent preparation for wheat. But this process would take several years to accomplish. The quick-er method is to supply the same constituents, either by composts made on the farm, or by the use of commercial fertilizers. The best mixture of the latter kind is a combination of soluble superphosphate of lime, which is better known by some as bone dust, potash and soda or their equivalent of unleached wood ashes-and a small per centage of ammonia. From two hundred and fifty pounds to three hundred pounds to the acre of the above mixture would not only restore to the wheat crop the constituents it lacked, but would leave a residue for the next crop.

Maryland Furmer. Walks and Talks on the Farm. In England, where the farms are nearly all rented to tenants, the landords sometimes insert a clause in the ease prohibiting the taking of two grain crops in succession from the same field, and others compel the farmer to raise a certain number of acres every year of turnips and feed them out; others will not allow the tenant to break up old pasture land or permanent meadows.—Mr. Lawes, who has studied the matter very thoroughly, proposes that all such restrictions should be done away with; and in order to prevent the tenant from impoverishing the farm from over cropping, that he should be compelled to produce on the farm every year a cerain amount of FLESH MEAT. If he does this he may crop the land as he pleases, and sell what he pleases, and it will be utterly impossible for him to impoverish the farm. The test of good

If I feed out everything raised on the farm, except wheat, barley, and clover seed, which is my rule, and speud more money in buying bran, oil cake, and corn than I get from the grain and seed sold, I am at a loss to know how keeping more stock, unless I bought more food, would enable me to make more maure. It is the quantity and quality of the food fed out that determines the quantity and value of the manure, and not the number of aulmals. I keep about 40,000 lbs. of live-stock on the

Maryland Super-Phosphate

(We court the Chemist's inquiry.)

After 23 years' experience in the Fertilizing business, and after establishing a wide reputation for the purity and excellence of his Bone Bust, the subscriber has been induced to prepare a Phosphate suitable to the requirements and every way worthy the attention of the Southern Farmer.

The "MARYLAND" is a rejuvenator and permanent improver of the soil. It atimulates equal to Perturian tiuans, and austains equal to Bone, being composed almost entirely of these ingredients, with a very liberal percentage of Potash in the residuum. There is no additerator nor inferior article used—every particle of the Phosphate being of essential benefit to the land—Nether pains nor expense have been spared in its preparation, and we claim for it the greatest benefit to the farmer from the smallest outlay.

For Cotton, Wheat and Corn, and as a general stimulant and alignent for worn and impoverished land there can be nothing superior. It is warranted to run as high in Ammonia and higher in Bone Phosphate than any other fertilizer in the market.
