The True Grounds of Confidence. Whence comes that firm reliable, that absolute undoubting faith in the efficacy of Hostetter's Stomaci Bitters as a remedy for indigestion, bilious disorders intermittent and remittent fevers, which notoriously provail in all parts of the United States? This confi dence has been growing for twenty years, and it is still extending. It is not the result of credulity; it has not been engendered by any human device, but is the spontaneous and natural consequence of experience. What people see daily going on under their own eyes they cannot question. When families in unhealthy districts that report to this wholesome regetable tonic, as a proventive, escape periodical fevers, and their immediat neighbors, who neglect this precaution, are prostrate by the disease, how is it possible that the phenomenor should be without its lesson? In like manner when it is seen that obstinate cases of dyspepsia, of liver co laint, of constipation, of persons weakness, and eral debility, yield to the operation of the famou remedy, how can even incredulity itself withhold its endorsement? Eye-witnesses of the salutary effects of the Bitters are to be found in every civilized settlement on this continent. The thousands upon thousands who owe their restoration to health and strength, or their servation from sickness, to its estraordinary medel nal properties, are enthusiastic in its praise. The mul-titudes who recommend it in a neighborly way to their fitted who recommend it in a neighbory way to their friends and acquaintances, as well as those who make public their estimate of its virtues, are always realy to state their reasons for the faith that is in them. There is one thing very remarkable in this breed of horses, viz: the striking resemblance in size, form and general character, and nearly all of their celts bear equal resemblance to their sizes; Indeed, the power of transmitting to their propeny their own form, constitution and temperament, is a distinguishing trait of all the Stallions left by JUSTIN MORGAN, and we believe no horse ever lived that presensed in a higher degree the power of stamping upon his off-pring his own great leading characteristics than ELECT DIMONE.
