the Cunard line, bound to Liverpool. He kept a "log" of the voyage which he was kind enough to place in our hands This representative of the United States on his return and which we have served up in a "hash" for the benefit of our read-

Leaving New York at 12 o'clock noon on the day above mentioned, by noon the next day, the reckoning proved the ship had run 265 miles in 241 hours. Sailing east the voyager gains about half an hour of daylight in the twenty-four; while he loses the same on his homeward bound voyage.

Friday at noon the good ship had made 300 miles; and on Saturday, 297. On Sunday at 11 A. M., the ship's crow-or as many as could be spared from duty-dressed in their best clothes, and the passengers assembled in the saloon, and the First Mate read the service of the Episcopal Church. The saloon of the China was a splendid apartment, fitted up in a style that few of ments than any of the towns visited by Mr. G. He strolled out to the quarter which occupies the former site of extensive brick and tile yards, of which he was forethe best hotel parlors can equal. The voyage was without incident worthy of speclal note. Having a calm sea the ship

Thursday being the 4th of July was not observed on board the English ship; but Green and three or four Americans celebrated the day in a bottle of brown stout on ed the day in a bottle of brown stout on deck, which they drank in a quiet way to the stars and stripes.

(At 12 o'clock on the following Saturday the reckoning made the distance to Liverpool 106 miles, and in the afternoon of that day the Irish coast came in view, presenting one of the most charming landscapes that ever greeted the eye of man. Over that ever greeted the eye of man. Over the smooth, blue of the ocean, undisturbed by a ripple, the green coast glowed in the setting sun in the distance, looking as pure and spotless as emerald. Even the rocks somed to be clothed in a robe of living green; and over the green meadows the milkmaids, with pail in hand, were seen going out to milk the cows which were ruminating in the shade or browsing the rich green grass. A more lovely picture of peace and rural happiness it were impossible to conceive. Alas! how deceptive are appearances. Here it may be truthfully said that,

"Every proposect pleases and only man is

f' Every propsect pleases and only man is vile." At 11 o'clock on the same night the ship reached her dock at Liverpool where it was raining. Here our "ancient mariner" spent the Ilere our "ancient mariner" spent the night and took the cars the next morning for Kilmarnock, Scotland, the clouds still dropping. He asked a boy, whose chief occupation seemed to be to look at the dripping passengers making their way to the train, if it always rained in Liverpool, who answered: "No, it snows sometimes for a change." The road ran within 12 miles of Ayr, the home of Burns, crossing a branch of the river Ayr. The railway passes through Damfries where the Poet was buried and where his monument may be seen. All this ground has been made classic by the strains of Scotland's marvelclassic by the strains of Scotland's marvel-ous bard. Thirty years ago Mr. Green left

On board the steamer once more at Liv-Kilmarnock, leaving friends and relatives, such as only are found in boyhood's home. But alas! what changes thirty years work! than the ships of the Cunard line. Quite

Of the scores of companions left here a lively and social company were on board, among the passengers Mrs. Harwhen young manhood went out into the riet Beecher Stowe, who contributed to the entertainments of the voyage by giving two lectures of her travels in Europe. Concerts were held daily during the voyage. A programme was made out and each lady's name called in turn to sing the piece allotted to her. Mrs. Stowe presided at the plano during the concerts, and the voyage, notwithstanding some rough weather passed very pleasantly, till the good ship safely landed her precious freight on the wharf at New York. And here ends our here's "log," who having seen the slow and old fashioned ways of the "old country" returns to the new untried world to buffet fortune, the wanderer with whitening locks found not one. A two days' search in Kilmarnock discovcred two or three old settlers who had a slight recollection of the stranger from the land of promise which lies toward the setting sun. These casual acquaintances of thirty years ago, narrated the chapter to our seeker after the flowers of youth. It was brief but full of sadness. Thirty years is a generation and those whom he seen the slow and old fashioned ways of the "old country" returns to the new decidedly more partial to the land of his adoption than ever, but envious of the delightful climate and life inspiring breezes wafted across the "green isle," fresh and pure from the salt bosom of old ocean.— Rejuvenated and reinvigorated by a trip across the Atlantic the famous dam builder, Francis Green, is now prepared to take contracts in his old business. sought had passed away, some to the "undiscovered country from beyond whose bourn no traveller returns;" others had gone out in the wide world. Some to Australia, some to South America, others to the great Republic. On the four winds to the four corners of the globe, as it were, the friends of his youth had been scattered, and our hero found himself a wanderer and a stranger in the midst of the scenes of his boyhood. After a two days' stay in Kilmarnock, the trip was resumed for Glasgow. Twenty-five years before our rambler had left this ancient Scotch town. The town looked familiar, the landscape, the objects of interest in a general way had changed but little, but old friends were all gone. The annual fair commenced the day of his arrival and the town was full of life, but one day sufficed to satisfy Green's desire for sightseeing. The people seemed slow in everything when contrasted with the rush which characterizes Americans; and their speech appeared to have grown broader and slower than of old to his Yankee ears. The hotels everywhere through England and Scotland-at least in the towns and cities of any note are conducted on what we term the "European style." The These advantages are therefore the properguest orders each item he wants and the ties of the mind and as lasting as the mir.d bill is rendered for "Hotel and Attendance," by a pretty bar maid. A sprightly, goodlife, and in all places where we ge. With a proper calcuation you must do greater and shilling, the stranger finds himself at last in the hands of the cabman, whose lowest charge for the shortest drive is two shillings. This is the style of England and Scotland.

At Glasgow our hero in search of the friends of his youth, paid 12s 6d fare to Loudenderry, Ireland, which is part railroad and part steamboat, and after a run of 14 hours, found himself on the sod of "Old Ireland," the land of his birth. A quarter of a century had made little or no perceptible change in the appearance of this old Irish town.

The "jaunting car,' so familiar to the

The "jaunting car," so familiar to the alone can open the doors of the most open employments in life, which you can never enter without them. But character and education do not come for idle wishes, but eye of every traveler in Ireland, was one cot the first objects that arrested our rambler's attention, and for two shillings he engaged one to drive out into the country ten miles and back. Out among the green lanes and si dis he found the air delightfully cool and beach. The farmers were just comment sing hay harvest, and the notes of the song thrush, the skylark and other birds, greeted his ears like the voice of old frier dis from out of the almost forgotten past. Woolen clothes vere found decidedly comfortable at this season in the cool fresh at more at the north of Ireland.

Leaving Le indonderry he journied to Beltast where or a arriving he saw the stars and strips wavin gover one gable of the Jures Hotel, while the Union Jeck sluttered from the first objects. The first wave one stale to begin the important business of your future life. Time slies swiftly and is bringing that business before you which will not wait until you are ready. diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A vast trial of its virtues, throughout this and other countries, has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact, that Cunnar PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Fulmonary Organs. ly known, so remarkable as hardly to be be-lieved, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and con-vinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection sgainst the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily mot at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Ten-der lungs need this defence; and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of Childhood, Curant Pzorozaz. Is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multi-and Chest of Childhood, CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multi-stitudes are rectued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centred on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured.

Originally the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, no cost or toll is spared in making every bottle in the utmost possible perfection. It may be cundently relied upon as possessing all the virtues it has ever exhibited, and capable of producing cures as memorable as the greatest it has ever effected.
