American Horses. Vermont has long been celebrated for its trotting horses, and the Morgan breed is so identified with that State that the name is almost synonymous for horses raised there. In New York. however, the greatest attention is paid mourning under, bivalvic treatment (an to this business. The single county of oyster over it) and am viewing this moun-Orange has over one hundred breeding tain scenery under diffculties. I went to establishments, some of which are very extensive. Charles Backman's, for instance, includes six hundred acres, recling, 'twas but a moment and a step or where are collected upward of one hundred and fifty horses, of all ages, many of which are of the finest trotting lineage. In the rear of the immense stables of this equine village are yards, for training the young animals. The dip; the lady also went to grass, but more whole business is as completely equipped as a commercial establishment in a large city, and the owner calculates ing sensation. I can't say I enjoyed the with almost equal certainty upon the profits of his enterprise. Millions of dollars are also invested on stock farms quadruped's apology, who fortified his all along the Hudson river in the breeding of trotting horses. There are sim- anything wrong with his wife a moment ilar breeding establishments in Iowa before when he stepped from her side, &c. and other western States. For the I learned it was dangerous to let kindness last thirty to forty years, the value of of heart over reach discretion, so in future trotting horses has increased even fas- I'll let wives faint as often as the weather ter than their numbers and speed, the permits, without having my vision obscurrate being at least 100 per cent every ed or wearing oysters outside of me, with decade. In 1858, Flora Temple was my eyedressed in a white handkerchief (the sold for $8,000; in 1862, the California damsel for $11,000; in 1866, Young Pocahontas for $25,000; and in 1867. Dexter, which in that year surpassed all previous speed—trotting a mile in 2 minutes 17 1-4 seconds-sold for $33, 000. It is now no unusual thing for fast trotting horses and fine stock horses of the best trotting blood to sell for from ten to twenty thousand dollars. This shows the immense popularity of the American breed of trotting horses, and the amount of wealth they represent. The founder of this breed seems to have been Messenger, whose lineage is traceable back to some of the finest Arabian blood in England. He was imported into New York in 1788, and was of superb form and extraordinary power and spirit. His form, with the remarkable vitality and endurance of his race, has endowed his progeny— which has been persistently used and trained to trotting-with extraordinary courage and endurance. So great has been the impress of his wonderful stamina and splendid form upon American much ground you will cover at a single horses that his value to the country may be estimated at millions of dollars. His stock has been bred in-and-in to an unprecedented degree, without any of the disastrous effects generally feared from imbreeding. This success has led many to think that where sire and dam are affected with no disease, imbreeding may be resorted to with safety, the only effect, being to intensify in the progeny the charcteristics common to both In this connection, a few words in reference to a very remarkable auction sale of horses which took place in July last at Tattersall's, London, will not be out of place. The animals offered belonged to the stock of the late Mr. Blenkiron, of Middle Park, near London, who was one of the most scientific and successful stock raisers in the world. Many of the nobility and the most noted horse breeders and fanciers of Europe were present. At the appearance of Blair Athol, the finest stallion in the world, the cry of "Hats off" was raised, and the whole assemblage uncovered in honor of a

The sale of this stallion was the great event of the entire auction, and the bidding was of nation against nation. Started at 4,000 guineas, the offers rose, amidst intense excitement, until, on the bid of the New Stud Company, Blair Athol was knocked down inens or the monstrous sum, in American currency, of $65,625. This was the largest sum ever paid for a horse, and by the side of it the prices paid here in America for such horses as Dexter, however much critisied, sink into insignficance. The famous Gladiateur, the triumph of the French turf, was sold to a private buyer at $35,000. Mandrake, who brought $10,500, comes to America. The twelve stallions realized altogether $182,280, an average of $15,190 each, while the entire stud, comprising, besides these, 198 mares with foals and 63 colts, brought the astounding and unprecedented sum of 102,370 guineas, or $536,440-over half a million dollars in a four days' sale. The enormous prices which these animals brought are simply an index, says the Evenino Mail, of the importance he has earned during his career as a guineas all told, or at the rate of 316, 000 a year. It is of the utmost impordustrial point of view, the tits horseflesh should be of the highest quality, and experience seems to have shown that this result is obtained by the breeding of these fancy and seems, in themselves so absurdly valued as direct them. so absurdly valued, as sires. How much is owed in this country to the Morgan bre d, or that of half a dozen other not d progenitors, it would be difficult to estimate justly. No matter what may be the increase of other mea is of transportation by the extenm'ore and more demand for horseflesh, and that of the best quality: and perhaps, in this light, the high prices paid for the English stallion s we have named, are not, after all, as extravagant as might at first sigbt be thought, even from the rigidly ec onomic point of view.

STORING POT ATOES.—As the time has arrived for potatoes to be harvested, I wish to 'say to those who have them to harve st, to put them in barrels, as the best mode of disposing of them. There are, those who have tried this for year s, and cannot be persuaded to again express my int ention to visit a camp keep them in any other way. Dig and meeting in this region, I beg my friends to exp'se to the air till dry; then put arrest me r.t once and place me in a lunatic U em up as directed, taking the barrels to the field. Store in the celler, any part most convenient. The advantage is, that the air is not exposed, as with open bins, which often vitiate it, and always leave a potato odor. You hav

Everything here indicates moneyed splendor without any of the genalno fluer feelings that should characterize the true gentleman and lady. All were amply and gorgeously dressed yet socially there seemed a queer combination of evils to posses them. Envious, jealous, dashy, scurrilous, slougy, and trashy in the fullest sense, they seemed to my eye (the right eye) simply superb animals. I got dinner with the fellow that frescoed my face (gratis mark and dinner both.) I didn't enjoy that dinner either. Having the frescoed eye next that feller I was in constant fear of one of his maulers taking another freak and giving my face the fluishing stroke. I got dinner through, my nervous system much demoralized, found myself dodging continually from tlies, bees and such like; even shadows of leaves twirling down would cause me momentively to imagine another earthquake shock coming, let me advise you and readers never attempt to arrest a falling women at a camp in the lumber region unless you want to see how

Well, the camp was immense; 10,000 people on the ground, 'twas said, by those having a full and unobscured view. I put it down as low as half (5,000.) They had not mere tents but very substantial two story houses with gas, water, &c., everything reduced to a system. After dinner, not feeling as I did after breakfast, (couldn't smile only on one side) and being able only to go one eye on things generally, I took a disconsolate stroll, which a ruralist might have considered refreshing could he have foreseen coming events. Passing toward their water works alone and unwarned. I met the remnant of an angry family; yes in a foment up to a black heat was that anger. Their home had been outragedupper story cleft with rocks and its fow survivors were there to avenge the wrong upon any perambulator passing that way, be he guilty or innocent, low or genteel, male or female. Mr. Hornet made a furious dash, instinctively I knelt, then I dove and lay prostrate, motionless and silent, r. | Can have them well sold at the Highest Price fandango performed above me (accompenied by distressing music,) and they again sat apoised, viewing me with contempt. 1 lay (not in state) in bulk, suspensively waiting the coming of a feller with a sheaf of blades on a pole, a match is applied, up go the hornet family and up got I, grateful us well to the inventor of matches and corn

Noticed sor le excitement in front on platform, ', hought it a fight, (they're frequent;) concluded I had seen enough frays for one day. Excitement merged into a prinic; people rushed to platforms; others tried to get in; some jumped out of windows; as there was nary window to fit me, I didn't jump, but got on my propa prepared for emergencies, little dreaming of what was coming. Such screaming, shricking! it were panelemoniumitself, and the reality was part breaking in upon my bedimed vision when a crash met my ear and I corvetted over the seat in front of me performing a feat of acrobatey that would ast onish the Flanlon Bro s.
