

The Farm.

Preparations for Winter.

At this season of the year a word or two on general subjects will not, we believe, come amiss to the working farmer.

To neglect stock just now is a most serious error. It is a most serious error. It is a most serious error. It is a most serious error.

Enterprise of Dairyman.

"Walks and Talks" in one of his papers in the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST, says: A miller who resides in one of the dairy districts tells me that the farmers are buying more and more corn-meal and bran every year to feed their cows.

How to Manage Runaway Horses.

Always stick to your horses so long as they are fast to the carriage. If a line breaks or the bits give way, step out of the fore end of the carriage, ever so doing takes him from his mouth these tiny eggs, which reach the stomach with the food, and as soon as hatched the young bot flies himself to the inside of the organ, remains there partially buried in the membrane, and causes much trouble and sometimes serious injury.

The Fowl House.

The sweepings from the poultry house properly saved, form the richest source of manure on the plantation. Analysis of the droppings of domestic fowls shows more than sixteen per cent. of nitrogenous matter, indicating its value to be nearly equal to the richest specimens of Peruvian Guano.
