Whether the balance belongs to the profit or the loss side of the year's account? How many of the thousands who draw their support from the soil direct can tell how much this or that crop has cost? The majority may tell perhaps the amount of money paid out and the amount received; but we have never met with one who could tell what each crop had cost and which were profita ble and which had brought him in debt. And while complaining bitterly of the unthe man who has given his farm full credit for what he has received. Let him count what it would cost if he lived in a town, to buy all his family consumes, and what r the many privileges he enjoys in the use of "well to do" people who follow other pursuits and dwell in towns and villages, how many ever earn more than a comfortable subsistence? They struggle to make both ends meet, and suffer a vast deal of anxiety and brain labor to accomplish even that. One of the greatest wants of the farm is a proper system of accounts. This want supplied, it would go far towards systematizing ever branch of his business. We venturo to say that no other business requiring so much careful management, is as careleesly pursued as farming in general, that gives returns equal to the latter. Conduct any other business in as hap-hazard a manner as pine-tenths of the farming operations are carried on, and nine cases out of ten it will run down and play out in a very short time.

At the commenement of the new year every farmer who wishes to be forehanded with his business, and knows exactly what every branch of his operations, and every acre of his land is paying him or costing him, should make an accurate inventory of him, should make an accurate inventory of his entire stock in trade, by placing his big-hearted Frank Cheatham, and gnash land at a reasonable market price or at its our impatient teeth at the elevation of the assessed value; and treat his stock and produce on hand in the same manner. He declares that it is far below that in vogue thirty years ago, and that it is making candidates for the insane asylum and piling up a heap of misery in many forms. He desires that there should be reasonable flogging in schools—beginning with the teachers. One thing which especially rouses his wrath is the way in which tired parents are forced to teach their sleepy children, during the evening, the lessons which they go to school the next day merely to recite. He demurs, and with reason, at doing the mental drudgery for which he liberally pays others who are purposely fitted for it. It is not alone from Philadelphia that this remonstrance comes. No father wants to teach school during all his leisure hours, and no child should be compelled to spend so much of the day in brain-work. Fewer studies and strict discipline in the schools would make sufficient time for the memorizing of lessons at the desk. It is the great fault of our school system that it demands that children should occupy themselves with more studies at one time than they are able intelligently to master.
