A VISIT TO PORT DDPOSIT.

Nonth East, Jan. 29th, 1873. MR. EDITOR .- Dear Sir: -On last Sabbath we took occasion to visit the much afflicted town of Port Deposit.

Our attention was first called by the ringing of the bell of the new M. E. Church. We attended the call and heard an excel-Protracted Meeting-Which still goes on lent discourse by the Rev. His remarks Assessor. The performance on the organ Boozy-We might mention the case of reflected much credit to the lady who presided at it.

After the close of the services we visited the ruins made by the disasterous element; and although there has been much written on the subject, we can exclaim with the Queen of the South when she visited Solomon in all his glory, the "half had never been told," and we are inclined to think the best pen will fail to describe the picturesque scenery of the ice.

We were informed by respectable citizens of the place that the gorge of ice ranged mometer stood 14° below zero at this place; from 16 to 40 feet thick, but if they should be providentially favored with a moderate thaw, the losses would not be so serious as was first anticipated. We visited the with the rest of mankind, received a coat- premises of the Messrs. > habitations had been seriously interfered with. In a number of places the live porkers had evidently taken possession of the dwellings.

Those two men who, with their families were so miraculously rescued from their perilous condition on the island, returned again standing still, the master-wheel on last Sabbath morning, to look after their breaking. This is the third one broken in stock, which, we understand, was found in fair condition; and after properly caring for them returned to terra firma over the went mad at Brick Meeting House last hills and dales of ice with safety. A genweek, and was killed above Lombardville; tleman residing above Rock Run informs Some dogs known to be bitten, have not the timely intervention of the railroad bank, which being composed principally of stone, resisted the ice which came like a mighty avalanche, threatning destruction to all that part of the town.

Perfect quiet pervaded the town from one end to the other, which was a sure indication that the rumsellers had suspended the retailing of the ardent during the Sabbath. Would it not have been creditable to our present Legislators if they had only respected the wishes of a large number of the citizens of the State last winter, and passed a law granting the voters of each town and district the privileges of deciding for themselves if they should have seven quiet days in a week or not. They legislated half the winter to regulate the gunners and trapmen on the Chesapeake and its tributaries, and paid no attention of the many petitioners to pass a Local
