Strong Minded Women of Europe. Mr. C. C. Fulton, Editor of the Baltimore American, in one of his admirable letters from Europe, writing from Hall, the place of the famous Jodine Springs, in Austria, thus describes the strong-minded women of that country:

Austria, thus describes the strong-minded women of that country:

The women of Austria, in the agricultural regions, are, like those of Swizerland, the master minds of the family. They are strong-hauded and strong minded, and can take care of themselves and their husbands also when necessary. They are evidently the "lords of creatien" outside of the cities, and need no one to take care of them. There is no labor too hard for them to untertake and perform a full day's work at. Whilst writing my eye is upon twenty or more of them engaged in the construction of the new Trinkhal in the rear of the hotel. The whole business of mixing and prapaing the mortar is in the hands of stalwart women, the carrying of brick and mortar up the ladders, in tubs balanced en their heads, is being gracefully and amortar up the ladders, in tubs balanced on the price of land and labor, unless of the dozen or more automatical looking men on the scaffolds slowly laying the brick and spreading the mortar which is brought to them on the top of the blonde looks or auburn curls of the "gentler" sex. That these women should be allowed to vote, and will have the franchise, whenever it is given to their husband, there is no manner of doubt, and they will then virtually have two votes as no husband in the rural districts of Austria, such as Vienna, the woman, and especially the wife, is the abject slave of her husband. They work and toil and carry on their shoulders all the burdens of the household, whilst the husband spends his leisure hours jovially in the restaurants and cafes. Husbands are scarce in Vienna, and the poor woman who

-El Paso, the terminal point of the western division of the Texas and Pacific Railway in Texas, promises to become a place of considerable importance upon the completion of that road. It is the centre of an extensive grape country, from which a considerable portion of Western Texas and Eastern Mexico are supplied with wine and brandy. Recently an extensive bed of bituminous coal has been discovered in the southern part of El Paso county, and about two miles north of the town is an ancient silver mine, which has lately been reopened. This mine, according to tradition, was one of the richest known to the Spaniards. The lode is well defined, and has been traced some four miles, with an average width of forty feet, and is so clearly defined that a person can walk upon it for most of the distance upon the outcroppings. It is supposed to extend south under El Paso and the Rio Grande, under in the mountains back of the latter place, where an old shaft shows that extensive work was done many years ago.

"MORE TOWN TALK."

The travel causes assigned by The Democrat, in its account of the sale of the Frazer property, for the decline of real estate, beats the verdict of the Irish inquest in the case of a man who lost his life by falling into the dock. It ran in this way: he came to his death from falling into the dock, by which he broke his neck, and being unable to swim he was drowned, and the weather being cold he froze to death. Now, all that can be said against this verdict is, that the causes assigned are more badly managed, but with an air and manner which it is very light speaking, to call offensive and presumptuous. The persons who are and have been in ower (for the writer does not aim at individuals) imagine and have imagined themselves, invested with authority possessed only by the Legislature; act like masters, not like servants, and think only in what way the largest assessments and most oner ous taxation can be imposed.

This extracting of money from the pock ets of others contrary to law and against their will, and the expending it with prodigality, they call public spirit. Inquiry is resented as affront.

The town rulers are not aware that tax payers is not an anonym, and if it were, that the right exists to call through the public press for accounts, and that they are to render it with prompt civility. The writer has heard a wise citizen declare that all villages desired to be incorporated into towns, and when their desire was gratified, had ever after, abundant cause for reflection and regret.

In truth, the repeal of the town charter of Elkton would be a propitious event. are beyond remedy, except by taking away the cause.

There are many intriguing and wily cit. izens, who seek to use the public expenditure for their private benefit, under the pretense of public spirit, and the securing of public ends.

The persons who are elected, are selected beforehand, by a bailiff to whose support they are pledged; and this bailiff has often had in view only the largest expenditure, the least work, and the suppression, or at least the confusion of accounts and vouchers.

There have been a few, and but a few exceptions to these remarks about bailiff's and their servants, the Commissioners. The money of the people, which the town rulers look upon as their own, is improvidently wasted; the sums expended are for what it would be sarcasm to call work, done in a way to which no private employer would submit.

There are many abuses; space only per

Better jog along our own way; out an attempt at collection, have passed it as a charge upon their successors, al-Proverbs 26: 17, "He that passeth by, and though Mr. Denny says the money has been paid. Such action is contrary to all true principle, to the proper keeping and rendering of accounts, and is calculated to lead to gross abuses.

All explanation with regard to these 400 has been curtly refused or evaded. The Town rulers forgetting that their powers are strictly limited, have assiduously sought to impose a rate of onerous taxation not laid down in the acts of incorporation, and to which, for that reason, is forbidden.

They have made an assessment in viola-"Mr. Equity" knows very well that the tion of law as to time and amount of
