BOILER INSPECTOR. Much of our outside is taken up this week with the county statement, which will doubtless prove interesting reading to the tax-payers. A new item appears under the head of "Miscellaneous Expenses" for James B. Sanner, " Boiler Inspector" $86.10. This item may need a little explanation for the general reader, as it is the first time Cecil county has been charged with boiler inspecting. The head under which the item is placed is not the most appropriate, in view of the circumstances, and the animus which necessitated this expenditure. Under "Expenses Incident to Crime," or "Expenses of Inquisitions" which are virtually the same, would have been the more appropriate place. Mr. Inspector Sanner was summoned to testify and give his scientific opinion before the famous Coronor's Inquest which was held in the case of the boiler explosion at the McCullough Iron Works at North East, which resulted in the death of two of the workmen and the wounding of others. There were other experts who examined the fractured boiler equally as capable, if not more so, of forming an opinion based on scientific knowledge, who did not hesitate to pronounce Mr. Sanner's opinion not the summer.

If so strong a demonstration had not been made by the unaulmous uprising of the town of North East, against the mischievous machinations of the "Elkton Ring," the matter would doubtless have been brought before the Grand Jury, with as much pressure as possible, to have a true bill found against the company, which would perhaps have amounted to very little would perhaps have amounted to very little.

The war overthrow it for a season, and the State, and this county especially, prospered during the few years of its banishment, as they never had before; but in an evil hour through the treachery of Tom Swann and Andy Johnson, the old scrpent again was enabled to wind its slimy folds about the vitals of Maryland, and the prosperity of the State has been declining from that hour. We tender our thanks to the publishers of River Side for the copy of "No. 1, Vol. 1," of the new magazine, and are willing to wait for our copy of "Summer Noon," till all bona fide subscribers are satisfied, as we have as much of the genuine article at present as we can stand, which is likely to last a month or two longer. In justice to the Alline publishers we acknowledge the receipt of the literary contents of River Side several months ago, with their circular letter pointing out the great profits to be derived from such an enterprise as the Messrs. We regard the past as only a beginning and we can be satisfied with it only as a start in the pursuit of greater and better things. We trust that our citizens sympathize with this view, and that they abhor a streetyped, low condition of education in contrast with progress and improvement. They will readily pardon one who has spent 18 years of his best days in conducting classical academies for speaking and writing as if he knew, from observation and experience, what such an instituand writing as if he know, from observation and experience, what such an institution unceds to make it permanently an ornament and a blessing to a community.—

sufficient reason, that the increased cost of living has necessarily increased the wages of men in all employments.

The problem proposed for solution, is: How can Elkton Academy sustain the teachers needed to give thorough instruction is all these branches?

This may be done by a partial endogment of the teachers' salaries, by establishing scholarships, by aiding talented but needy scholars, by liquidating the debt of the institution, and by greatly increasing the attendance of scholars from the home field and from abroad.

Por a fuller statement of these methods, I must refer the reader to an article in our

Many years ago, when the Academy building had been burned, the Trustees made an unsuccessful effort to obtain funds for rebuilding, and were compelled to do it by selling a portion of the grounds and contracting a debt of $1,000. This has since been increased in refurnishing and repairing to about $1,500.
