In this number I propose to review the Fourth Article of the Constitution, on the In this number I propose to review the Fourth Article of the Constitution, on the judiciary, and I think the people will be satisfied of the truth of my proposition in the last number, that "many of the people's wrongs have their origin in the organic law of the State."

The convention which framed the present Constitution, was composed of one hunder of the instincts of mankind as infinitely particularly and the closing days of a carnival, the end of Summer Season is marked by a sort of frenzy. Regret for last opportunities in tensifies the passion of the moment. Though he didn't wear his pants in his boots, nor was clover seed distinguishable in his lock, yet to those lutimate with the tricky ways of the great corruptionist, it looked as if the man whom Senator York laid out cold was proparing to join the Grangers. the instincts of mankind as infinitely pa- paring to join the Grangers. thetic. But if disappointed in expectations, ber there were forty-five lawyers, and but sighing for the "might have been" is of North East, one evening of last week, was thirty-four farmers and thirty-nine of var- little avail, and many a dream born in the sweet spring-tide, bright as the tinting of autumn leaves, is dashed to earth as with M. D., of The Cecil Democrat has seen pro-or with their unity of purpose, it would not be any exaggeration to call that body a convention of lawyers.

The judiciary system framed by this Convention, justifies the conclusion that the the lawyers exercised a controlling influence in its deliberations, and that they were more mindful to provide comfortable seats for their own fraternity than to secure the prosperity of the people. The entire expense of our cumbersome judiciary, direct and indirect, must be some where near $500,000, probably more.

When we reflect that this immenses amount of money is mainly extracted from the poor soil of a small State, it is no wonder that the farming interests languish and when they see their hard-earned cash lavished on one profession, it is not wonder, to catch a "dashing young and wealthy bean, you know?" Something or somebody is always being investigated here. And now comes the petty judiciary. Ostensibly the meditators between the people in the more insignificent civil disputes, they have gradually the city are making more at their practics than four thousand dollars, the pay of a judge.

Under the Constitution of 1861 the Court of Appeals consisted of five judges at a salary of $3,000 each, making $15,000 against $28,000, a trilling difference of $13,000 in one court. Under that Constitution there were thirteen circuits with one judge to a circuit at a salary of $2,500 per annum, amounting to $32,500, now we have seven circuits with 14 associate judges whose salary each is $2,800, making $39,200, to which add the salary of the judge of the eighth circuit court $3,500, and you have $41,700 or a difference of $10,200 against reversed relative positions by becoming whose official character suffer only through association. and cry of "stop thief" in the District of Columbia to divert attention from home affairs where the people are directly interested, and to sections where they have not the least personal concern. It wont do, Doctor, it is "too thin;" we all know that the close connection of the District of Columbia with the national administration has had the effect of throwing opposition journals into a position of hostility to the local government of the District, and made it a shining mark for slander and defamation.

Yesterday, as it were the capital and the control of the Control o to a shining mark for stander and destroin.

Yesterday, as it were, the capital was a disgrace to the whole nation. To-day, with its magnificent avenues and streets, it is a glory and a pride. Its capital has almost doubled, the value of its real estate has increased 50 per cent; in substantial growth it has surpassed almost every company to the surpassed almost every com growth it has surpassed almost overy community on the continent, while the taxes have not been increased above the average of other cities of the same class. Can we say the same of "My Maryland" under Damocratic rule? "I guess not." The Democracy of Maryland came into power alamogous for retranslument and reform, and Democracy of Maryland came into power clamorous for retrenchment and reform, and will go out with largely increased taxation, and an accumulation of the public debt. In a word the Democracy of Maryland stand branded and blistered with broken promises and pledges unredeemed. So qualify your invectives, Doctor, and inform the tax payers of Cecil why it is, that under Democratic rule it takes six bailiffs to perform the same work that three performed under Republican rule; tell them why the bills for medical attendance to the Ekton "jail hummers" and "alms house paupers" are so largely increased; and why it costs 300 per cent more to take out letters of administration, or to procure other legal papers at Elkton, Cecil county, than it does in the adjacent counties governed by the same staute laws. In fact, Doctor, you being a medical man, just give us a prescription that will kill the ring worms of Elkton, and leave the District of Columbia to work out its own enterprise after its own ideas.
