But has it not been conclusively shown that many of these money-princes all over the tickets this Fall, one of each party, I the country, who went finely arrayed and kept fine establishments, were only hanging on the very brink of ruin, without any solid means?

The Freedmen's Saving Bank is still all right, although they have had a heavy run. There were some droll scenes at their counter on Saturday last. The assembly was a mixed one, the colored race of course predominating, and many questions were asked which provoked laughter. One old colored man with a black hat well crowded if a hen hatched in it, and having in his hand two umbrellas and a fish-pole, and a blanket wrapped around his tattered coat, shouted at the top of his voice upon recognizing a female acquaintance, "Fore God, wears. The people here say all honor to years. The people here say all honor to or cecil, county.

His appearance was the signal for general laughter, for his physiogomy would have provoked it, aside from the trunk which he carried. A husky voice cried out-"What am you gwine to do with dat trunk!" "O, you go way chile; I ain't got no pockets, deys done gone and I'se got free hundred dollars; I has. You poor trash can laff all you want." He fell in at the rear end of the line, and dragging his trunk, awaited until its "lengthened sweetness, long drawn out," should place him at the portal where the money-teller would hand him his cash on demand. An old colored man, whose locks were frosted to a whiteness, which betokened four score years and ten, having a whip slung over his shoulder, shuffled in with his number twenty boots, and walked in tiptoe, fearing, perhaps, he might soil the tresselated floor. Espying the Hon. Peter

Campbell, he exclaimed: "Praise de Lord, honey, l's done glad you'se heah; I'se left cart wid a load of ceal up heah on de corn, to see about the ole woman's money-slie's done got de bank book-in de name of God, what must Look at the po' and the night air was overladen with trash trying to barrass dero friends-I'se gwine to my cart, I am !" In the line was old Fred, who is known to all printers as tiously borrowed a fine horse and buggy the "hash man." The old apple woman of Celtic origin had her "chick" book, and was auxious that the "domned nager miles into the country for the purpose of clarks" should hurry up, as she wanted having a high old time. The team was her two dollars and a half before the "dirty black bank bust up."

THE NEW GOVERNOR. And now let me say a word in regard to the feeling with which the appointment of Hon. A. K. Shepherd was received here. I would not ask it, but to contradict some of the slanders and misstatements which appeared in The Cecil Democrat, a short ime since, and taken from the New York Herald. That paper and the New York Sun are known to every intelligent man to be enemies of this District, and will resort to anything, no matter how unscrupulous, to abuse the District Government.

The appointment of any other man to be Governor of this District would have been an outrage, and neither violent partisan clamor, the vituperative and medacious assaults of a couple of unscrupulous newspapers, the figure of personal prejudice, or rank jealousy of the high position he has attained can detract from his well-earned fame. That Washington is to-day a beautiful and prosperous city instead of a straggling and muddy absurdity is to more than any other one man, due to Alexander R. Shepherd, where he was born, and where he raised himself from a humble boy to his present high position. His brain planned, his strong arm executed, and his indomitahis hands as readily as any other appli cant. Had the choice been left to the white tax-payers of the District (to say nothing of the colored men) he would have received nine-tenths of their votes. President Grant did a wise and judicious act when he appointed him Governor, as it also meets with the universal approval of ninety-nine out of every hundred of the citizens of the United States who visit the National Capital. They feel a debt of gratitude to the man who had the genius, courage, and will to do what we considered would be making Washington the capital of a great and free people. They would be willingly taxed ten-fold to have the improvements continued. These are the feelings that animate every one who knows what has been done for Washington in the past three years. And the honor is justly due Governor Shepherd, for he down over his eyes, looking very much as has done more for the people of his territory for the last three years than has been General Grant for the appointment of Mr. Shepherd, and that he has appreciated the services of a faithful public servant whom
