Dr. G. B. Loring, in Murray's book, "The Perfect Horse," says: that the old. It is natural for a cow to suckle folly of bad feeding is no greater than her young, and it is unnatural that the the folly of bad stabling. The practice calf should not be allowed to take its of providing warm and tightly-built food from the udder of the dam. The stables for young colts is as injurious to them as forcing their growth by heavy feed. A colt requires fresh air; and, if he is furnished with an opportunity, he will be sure to get it. His cleansing the bowels of the pent-up prompt lungs are the largest part of his internal organs; and he will provide for them, if there is any way to do it.—

When the calf is a shield him from the storm, undisturbed week old a little skim milk may be if he should see a star through the crevice above him, and feel the fresh after a fortnight a little oatmeal flour, breeze whistling through a crack by his side. He wants a well-ventilated stable, and a chance to get out of it whenever he has a desire to do so. And, above all things, let him stand on the ground, if possible, while in his box; and, at any rate, in a yard into which his box opens. A floor, especially a wooden floor, is bad enough for a mature working-horse; but to a colt it is almost destruction. I have no shadow of doubt that we ruin thousands plank floors. The wood, when dry, is a non-conductor of heat, and tends to keep the hoof above its natural temperature, and to remove from it all its natural moisture; and, when wet, it be skimmed, and a little bean meal may rounding temperature by fermentation. As the long nights are upon us, when more artificial ght is necessary, it behooves all who require a good ILLUMINATING OIL to examine it carefully and ascertain beyond the possibility of a doubt its perfect safety. It is an established fact that four-fifths of the ordinary Coal Oil found in the market is quite inflammable and dangerous, igniting readily at ordinary temperatures when brought in contact with the flame of a lighted match. During the Winter the newspapers almost daily record the fact of terrible suffering and death from the taking fire of Coal Oil by the breaking or upsetting of lamps. All danger of such results might be entirely avoided by the use of PRATT'S ASTRAL OIL, free not only from the danger of explosion, BUT FROM THE DANGER OF THE OIL TAKING FIRE SHOULD THE LAMP BE UPSET OR BROKEN.

We can endorse this Oil as EXTRA SAFE. with the fullest confidence, after an experience of over three years, during which period we have handled upwards of FIFIT-TWO THOUSAND GALLONS, which has been used in thousands of families with great satisfaction, and from the use of which no accident I as occurred, either directly or inflinedty.
