The New Constitution of Pennsylvania forbids the granting of free passes, and consequently the editors along railroad lines to whom annual passes were heretofore always issued, and who are fond of traveling, are likely to suffer in the privilege henceforth.

Notwithstanding this new order of things the Philadelphia and Baltimore Central Railroad, sent us the customary annual Pass for 1874, but as we made but little use of it heretofore, we returned it, and proposed to pay fare in future for the use of the road, and charge the company for advertising their time table. This proposition brought a response from the President. Mr. Wood, requesting us to withdraw the time table of the road from The Whig.

President Wood suggests that the time table of a railroad is of considerable benefit to a newspaper, which is an intimation, if it means anything, that we ought to puriblish such standing advertisement free. This argument of the President is as strong for any other business, and the papers meight have a good time inserting free busines, advertisements for corporations and ind lividuals. We have for several years ad vertised for the road to the amount of $1/4 annually, and last year used the road to the amount of forty or sixty cents. This kind of free pass seemed to suit the President's views very well, but business, and pay for our use of the road they will inevitably seek safety further over the signature of "Equity," makes an when we propose to reverse the order of and charge the company for the use of our paper, the President intimates that we beset with so many enemies.
