From the American Farmer. SHORT-HORNS OR (DURHAMS.) Much has of late been said of this breed of cattle, and as we have pubgreat value for beef, &c., and especially of their history, as set forth in a series of able papers from the pen of Mr. Coffin, the principal breeder of them in Maryland, and published in the first papers from the principal breeder of them in Maryland, and published in the first papers. lished descriptions, with portraits of volume of the present series of the cipal care of them, the cows become

In 1834 an association in Ohio brought over nineteen bend and in the CW in the CW. sociation in Onto brought over nineteen and rather long; her horn is short, deladditional lots and since then several icate, and curved forward, white with a additional lots, and since then several hundred with well-established pedigrees have been imported into the United eye, which is bright, large and promi-States. From the fact that the first prominent breeders of the Short-horns the name of Durhams, and have so retained it with many ever since, have been domesticated in this country. they have been imported in greater numbers than any other breed, they are more widely known, and have acquired greater popularity; surely this must have been from some good qualities which have so strongly tended to recommend them. They have become acclimated, and are healthy, thriving on common food equally well with our native cattle. They are of large size, fine tender meat, grow rapidly, and to the amount of food they consume. make powerful and docile oxen, are excellent in the dairy, giving large quantities of milk and butter and rich cheese With all these qualities, we might readily suppose pure Short-horns were just and the depth of color increases with the breed for Chester county farmers. Our own choice and what we have for ly like that of a fawn, and at all ages our own use is the Durham, the Jersey, and the Durham and Jersey mixed, and we feel thoroughly satisfied with them. Wherever there is good pasturage, and plenty of Winter fodder, the Durhams will thrive well, but they are not the breed for stony land, with scant herbage, where they have their living to earn; the Devon or the Kerry cows are the ones for that. They are naturally good milkers, and where raised for that object no milk suppose they were not as good milkers found their milk to be very rich. *

As to the color, tastes differs. White is usually least preferred, simply as a matter of taste, and therefore as a color for thoroughbreds is not so saleable; but for the beef-breeding, it of a coarse tendency, and giving her

S. P. SHARPLESS, State Assayer. The Bone for the above analysis was forwarded by the Superintendent of the Eastern Experimental Farm, without our knowledge, and was taken from a shipment in the ordinary course of business to another party.

The most satisfactory guarantee of the purity of our Ground Bone, is that our mill is open at all times to the thorough inspection of our customers. Some farmers have thought it necessary to purchase other fertilizers, fearing that Ground Bone is too slow in its action. The general experience of our customers, however, seems to show that when ground as fine as ours is prepared, it acts with satisfactory promptness. The following letter from a well known and reliable citizen, of Lancaster county, Pa., which appeared in the Oxford Press of 12th Mo. 3d, 1873, without any agency on our part, is to the point: EUTON, LANCASTER COUNTY, 11th Mo., 2d, 1872.

injured by fly in the fall of 1872. One acre along ide the above, and treated in the same moure, except without
