THE CURRENCY AND THE VETO. The veto of the Currency bill put a timely check to the wild schemes of the inflationists, and has brought them back to soberly consider what measures can be devised to bring about specie payments, and at the same time cause no severe shock to the business of the country, which now languishes as much from uncertainty of business men, as to what Congress would or will do in reference to the money of the country, as iness of the country, which now languishes reference to the money of the country, as from the long stimulating effect upon the trade and business of the country which an exclusive paper money system has fostered. The great waste of the war destroyed hundreds of millions of real substantial property in the South and West, while in the Eastern manufacturing Districts, and in the commercial centers the business created by the war was profitable, inasmuch as the war caused a drain in the shape of taxes from all other sections to those points where the Government procured its material and supplies of all kinds. These parts of the country grew rich at the expense of the other parts, and added to the wealth acquired through the channels of legitimate trade, many millions additional by stock and gold gambling. The surplus gold has been drained from the country and sent abroad by the manipulations of the gold gamblers, who Congress has constantly favored, by taking no decided means to favored, by taking no decided means to bring the paper money of the Government to par with specie. Had the millions of surplus gold sold as merchandise in the stock market by the Secretary of the Treastory here kent in the yaults of the Treastory here. ury, been kept in the vaults of the Treas. ury, enough long since, would have been accumulated to have redeemed all the greenbacks in circulation. The Government with a sufficient amount of coin on band to redeem the greenbacks, would have had no difficulty in floating the present volume of paper money, and in addition to this there would have been a large amount of specie added to the circulating medium. This would have provided an abundance of currency, which would have been on a par with the money of the world, and have checked the many wild-cat speculations which are always springing up in exclusive paper money eras.

payment, the speculations which were based, upon nothing real, came to a dismal end, when people got tired of all credit and determined to settle up. In the midst of distress the inflationists cry out for more paper money for the South and West; but they one and all utterly fail to tell us how, in case the Government should print an extra hundred millions of greenbacks and national bank currency, the needy South and West are to get this money from the Government. They have nothing to exchange for it. Then how is it to benefit these parts of the country? Clearly, this has never been answered by any inflationist. The fact is the war destroyed a great deal of real wealth which the fiction of paper money and credit has been representing all these years, and which has completely played out. The honest good sense of the nation has at length asked to see this wealth, and there is nothing to show for it. Capital in an undeveloped state exists in untold millions in the West and South, but it will require labor and time to turn it into money. The money capital is owned principally in the old commercial sections of the country, and it will stay for it, which will require time and industry; and to facilitate this nothing is ometined dead as uniform currency which is based upon the standard of the money of the world, and subject to the least fluctuation. Before the war we had a currency of gold, silver and paper. All under $5 was coin, and our agricultural interests staedily improved, and every other interest steadily improved, and every other interest connected with it. Had we a gold and silver currency exclusively for less amounts the means of wealth the means

The inflationists talk of appealing the question of indefinite postponement of specie payment and more paper money to the people. The popular sentiment on this matter has undergone a marvelous change within the last decade, if it is not found almost unanimous in propognous for a contract with a representative of the Russian Government, for the building of sixty-five anthracite coal burning engines for use on railroads in the dominions of the Czar. There was an animated struggle between the Otaut Works and the Baldwin Locomotive Words of Philadelphia for this job, but the Jerseymen secured it. —The danger of a sectional war growing out of the inflation veto is scouted by The Wheeling (Va.) Intelligencer. It says the present outbursts of passion will not amount to anything a few months hence, present outbursts of passion will not amount to anything a few months hence, and that any attempt to make inflation an issue in the South and West will fail.— There is nothing in the currency question, it says, as a sectional issue, since more money would have the same effect on all sections. It then places the whole subject in a nutshell by showing that it is not scarcity of currency which ails the South and West, but a scarcity of values in the shape of surplus cotton, tobacco, wheat, corn, and pork. Continuing, it says, "The West shipped $500,000,000 worth of provisions to England last year, and could have shipped more if she had had more to spare. She is as well off to-day as compared with what she would have been had her various crops failed. Another year, if she has large crops, will probably give her money enough to entirely change the present sectional prejudice engendered by the veto. In a few years the West and South will both be very rich in surplus capital. The present feeling is, therefore, not founded on an issue that will endure. There is no "peculiar institution" to sustain it.— Five years of prosperity will burry it in oblivion with the mass of excitements that are continually springing up and dying out in a great country like this." are continually springing up and dying out in a great country like this."

PURE GROUND BONE.

To the Experimental Farm Club, West Grove, Pa. BOSTON, MASS., Dec. 9, 1873.

GENTLEMEN:-I herewith submit you a report upon the fertilizers sent to me by J. I.

No. 1. Waring's Pure Ground Bone. This is exactly what it purports to be, and is entirely free from adulteration. It con-

Rone Phosphate of Lime, . . 45.78: 20 97 P. 2: O. 5. Organic and Volatile Matter, - 37.91, and 3.28j Nitro.

The Bone for the above analysis was forwarded by the Superintendent of the Eastern Experimental Farm, without our knowledge, and was taken from a shipment in the ordinary course of business to another party.

spection of our customers. Some farmers have thought it necessary to purchase other fertilizers, fearing that Ground Bone is too slow in its action. The general experience of our customers, however, seems to show that when ground as fine as ours is prepared, it acts with satisfactory promptness. The following letter from a well known and reliable citizen, of Lancaster county, Pa., which appeared in the Oxford Press of 12th Mo. 3d, 1873, without any agency on our part, is to the point:

any agency on our part, is to the point:

Figure 1 Research Structure of the structure of 1873, I will give the fill wing: From one agree the yield was 40 down sheaves, which, when threshed, yielded to fill stand 12 pounds of wheat. On this agree the yield was 40 down sheaves, which, when threshed, probled to bashed and 12 pounds of wheat on the agree to pounds of Waring's to we level been harrowed in, and 17 buthels of white wheat drilled. It was semewhat injuried by high in the fall of 1872. One agree along side the above, and treated in the same amoure, except without the bone, yielded 22 down making 16 turbels and 8 pounds to the acre. Difference in favor of Waring's ground ben, in my cape there, or 20 busheds and 4 10 at the acre. My deficienting price for two I bases again of $12.10 per acre, when wheat is $1.50, in favor of jutting on the lane. These experiments we have tried for our own and others' advantage. We have tried other fertilizers and received but little in return for our great outley.

This Extra Fine Bone is not obtained by sifting it out of the other, but is made by passing it through the mill a sufficient rumber of times to reduce it to the required degree of fineness. For the Spring of 1874 our prices at the mill, without bags, are as follows:

Extra Fine, $2.50 per ton additional. LARGE LOTS SPECIAL TERMS.

These are the prices at the mill, and do not include lags. We will fill lags furnished us, or supply them at cost; or will ship in our own lags at 25 cts, per ton additional, the lags to be returned within ten days, free of cost to us.
