In the shadow of the crumbling fortifications of the Paris of ancient days, little garden plots for children have sprung up. A pretty club house, just completed. flies the flag of the American Red Cross

Porte de Versailles has become "The Boor of the Children" The youngsters of the street whose moth ers must labor daily in munition factories or shops are gathered up each day and sent here to the outskirts of the city where they can run and shout and play to their hearts content. They can dig and rake and hoe in the good brown earth until white cheeks and tan and healthy and snubby noses are emartly freckled. At noon day there is a warm meal to eatisfy growing appetites, and at four o'clock there is an additional "gouter" of bread and chocclate. With a program like that the not obstinate child must necessarily scome hearty and healthy

BUT ONE WAY.

There is but one governmental agency, one national instrument, through and by which the United States can wage war for the next two and a half years, and that is the Administration which was placed in power at the last national election. Any weakening of the influence and prestige of the Administration is a weakening of the political power and influence of this nation with other nations—a weakening of our war power. Our soldiers will fight as bravely and efficiently, our sailors brave the dangers of the submarined seas with the same courage and success But the political and moral strength of the nation's government, its power to bring peace won by our fighting men. will be weakened by the defeat of the party of the Administration

As Roosevelt said in 1898, other nations will look at our votes this year from only one viewpoint. They will draw no fine distinctions. To Europe the election of a Republican Congress this year would mean a divided nation, a refusal to endorse and stand, At P T Potts Old Creamery Building. by the principles President Wilson has proclaimed as the principles of our nation and the aims and purpose of our country
