Is more cosmopolitan than usual, containing (in story, essay and travel) sketches of life in France, Spain, Turkey, Syria, "timely" papers may be mentioned a descriptive criticism of the statue of Liberty Enlightening the world, by Charles de Kay, with sketch and portrait of the sculptor Bartholdi, and engravings of the statue and of other wo ks by the same hand; also, Damascus by Diligence, by Done in Great Britain; the narrative of British civil service reform, by Edward O. Graves, one of the civil service examiners under President Grant; A State Ball in Constantinople; Village Sanitary Work, the third of Col. Warnig's papers of practical suggestions, -- this month about sewage, ventilation, earth-closets, etc. There is also a profusely illustrated paper on Croton Water, by W. H. Rideing, with some exciting incidents of hair-breadth escapes from drowning in the aquaduct,-probably the completest description of the great squeduct ever written. The current discussion of the merits of the Russian novelist, Tourgueneff, receives an accession in a biographical sketch by Boyseen, with portrait. Charles Dudley Warner has a study of character in his obituary notice of the hero of My Summer in a Garden, Calvin, the cat. papers are Benjamin Disraeli, by E S. Nadal; The Traditional Music of the Spanish Pyre nees, by Nena Sturgis; Pond Life, by Mrs

Herrick (a study from the microscope); T Immortality of the Soul, an attempt at a cratic dialogue, by Edward Payson; and an illustrated paper on Horses. Dr. Holland's Nicholas Minturn is continued, and Nicholas's plans for dealing with dead-beats are put into practice. Mrs. Burnett, the author of That Lass o' Lowrie's (which is receiving so much praise from the critics), has a short stoof Franco-American life in Paris, entitled Lo Monsieur de la Petite Dame. The poetry of the number is contributed by Mrs. Thaxer, Mrs. Piatt, Mrs. Elizabeth Akers Allen, Charles T. Dazey. The Fu-ture of New York, Houses and Things, and The Changes in Preaching, and pays a high tribute to the late Edward Seymour of the scribner firm. The Old Cabinet disagrees with Tourgueneff's own estimate of the strength of his imagination, has something about Jugglery and Miracle in Art, etc., etc. Home and Society has a humorous talk about Glassware and Glass-Houses, by Clarence Cook (who will contribute short articles to this department from time to time). The end for which the appropriation was denied having been fully accomplished, there can be no reasonable objection to the government giving to the army any assistance it can agreeably to the law. The government would have no right to enter into a contingent contract for the support of the army dependent upon an appropriation hereafter to be asked for. It is quite another and a correct thing for the government to certify to the correctness of accounts, leaving soldiers to negotiate these voucoers, if they can, and where they can. This would be nothing more than a confession of judgment on a debt fairly incurred. If Congress were to refuse to make the appropriation at the next session, as it is not likely to do, the payment of those certificates would still remain a matter strictly between borrower and lendor, and the government, never having been a party to the transaction, would still have nothing to do with it. The Cabinet has bad the matter under consideration, and will probably decide this week as to what action shall be taken by our Government. Secretary Evarts' position is understood to be that an American Commission should be appointed provisionally upon the understanding that the Commission shall not have any compensation unless Congress shall ratify their appointment. > Dalmatia, was a short time ago the scene of a most extraordinary and terrible tragedy. Opposite the parish church lived a householder named Tomic, who, becoming suddenly a prey to mad rage, killed his wife and then his father, who had attempted to restrain him. When the police came they found that Tomic had everywhere effectualty barred an entry, and taken up a commanding position with a musket and plenty of ammunition. They were, therefore, compelled to turn back, and meanwhile Tomic put a bullet through a young man who crossed the street, and severely wounded a woman. The police then drew a cordon around the house, but Tomic's musket commanded the space between his house, the church, and the top of the adjacent streets, and no one dared cross the street or apthe maniac's window. After the block- speat in the same manner. ade had lasted two days and Tomic showed no signs of giving in, it was resolved to keep up a perfect hailstorm of wounded five persons.
