

Few places of 22,000 population are more active or more attractive than Denver. Hardly eighteen years old, it is filled with neat and tasteful and often expensive houses. There is not a city that would not rejoice in the possession of so many moderate-sized and tastefully constructed two-story brick, with large yards, the grass of which is kept green and fresh by constant use of the hose. Trees have been planted in almost every street, and appear to be flourishing, while the gutters run with pure water. From every street the foot hills, only low in comparison with the snow-capped mountains behind them, are seen rising apparently four or five miles off, but really at three times that distance. The summits of these "hills" are often 10,000 feet above the sea level, while the highest of the snowy peaks—Grays—is 14,150 feet. The altitude of Denver itself is 5,317 feet. The extreme lightness and clearness of the atmosphere is very deceptive, and a man may walk miles before he reaches an apparently near object. The atmospheric dryness is as great as its rarity. One's hair becomes dry, and manifests an obstinate determination to stick out in all directions. If wet, it dries in five minutes. One can hardly get into a perspiration if he tries ever so hard. Some strangers feel light headed; others are made sleepy, while some cannot lose consciousness after tossing about for half a night. A headache over the eyes is not an uncommon symptom on first arising. The benefit of the climate for consumptives is too well known to need detailed facts. Its drawbacks are occasional sudden and remarkable changes of temperature, a fall of 57 degrees in an hour having been noted, a tendency to aggravate neuralgic rheumatism and a development of catarrhal symptoms. Everything is costly here; fruits are brought from California and the East, potatoes are sold by the pound, flour is $5 and upward for the sack of ninety-eight pounds, and goods of most descriptions rate at about thirty per cent. over Eastern prices. Splendid teams are numerous. Some of the churches are handsome and elegantly fitted up, and nowhere will one see a larger proportion of well-dressed and well-bred people. Many of these are the consumptive invalids who are either temporary or permanent residents. When the lungs are only slightly affected or the tubercles not given place to cavities, a perfect cure, or at least an important check in the disease, is generally effected. Advanced cases, however usually reach a termination here more speedily than at the East.

A book agent of this city has just returned from the Honey Lake country. The agent one day stopped at a cabin, situated in the edge of the foothills. Before reaching the cabin, half a dozen dogs of assorted sizes and unrecognizable breeds started up from under stunted pines or came running from sheds about the place, yelping and barking like a pack of coyotes. In the wake of the dogs swarmed forth seven or eight bear-headed, flaxen haired children, plainly all of one breed, the forest breed. The juveniles were followed by a gaunt, saffron-complexion woman of about forty. By cooking for many years before an open fireplace, she had become as effectually smoke-cured as any herring. To the woman who thus appeared the agent made known his business. "Wall, stranger, I'm afeard yar come the wrong place of yer got nothin but books to sell. Ef yer had some powder or caps, or suthin' in the amercion line, yer might sell some to my old man. As fer books, stranger, we're not much on the read yar."

"Could I see your husband, mam?" asked the book agent. "Wall, stranger, I reckon yer could ef yer was whar he was; he's big enough fer to see, Lord knows."

"He's not at home, then?" "Stranger, he's not home."

"Will he be likely to return soon?" "Can't say, stranger; he's a little onsartian."

"Which way has he gone? I may meet him somewhere in the settlement."

"'Reckon not, stranger; he's gone out bummin'."

"Gone out bummin'! What do you mean by that?" "Wall, stranger, he tuck down his gun this mornin', and from a wink he giv me as he started away I calculate he's gone off somewhere to bum a sheep or two." Neada Territorial Enterprise.

A Dutchman in the Pennsylvania oil regions let his hands to an oil company last Spring on condition of receiving one-eighth of the oil produced. The well proved to be a pretty good one, and the farmer began to think the oil men should give him a better chance, and ventured to tell them so. They asked him what he wanted. He said theyought to give him one-twelfth. The arrangement was finally made, with the understanding that the Dutchman was not to tell anyone. All went smoothly until the division day came, when his friend was early at hand to see how much better he would be off under the new bargain. Eleven barrels were rolled to one side for the oil man and one for him. "How's dish?" said he. "I think I was to get more as before. You have made some mistake." The matter was explained to him that he formerly got one barrel out of every eight, but it was his proposition to take one out of every twelve. This revelation took him aback. He scratched his head, looked cross and relieved his swelling breast of feelings of self-reproach by indignantly remarking, "Well, dat ish the first time as ever I knowed eight was more as twelve."

—The music of the future—sixty day notes.

Few of the persons who handle Bank of England notes ever think of the amount of labor and ingenuity that is expended on their production. These notes are made from pure white linen cuttings only, never from rags that have been worn. They have been manufactured for nearly 200 years at the same spot—Laverstock, in Hampshire, and by the same family, the Portals, who are descended from some French Protestant refugees. So carefully is the paper prepared that even the number of dips into the pulp made by each workman is registered on a dial by machinery, and the sheets are carefully counted and booked to each person through whose hands they pass. The printing is done by a most curious process in Mr. Coe's department within the bank building. There is an elaborate arrangement for securing that no notes shall be exactly like any other in existence. Consequently there never was a duplicate of a Bank of England note, except by forgery. According to the City Press, the stock of paid notes for seven years is about 94,000,000 in number, and they fill 18,000 boxes, which, if placed side by side, would reach three miles. The notes, placed in a pile, would be eight miles high; or, if joined end to end, would form a ribbon 15,000 miles long; their superficial extent is more than that of Hyde Park; their original value was over $15,000,000,000, and their weight over 112 tons.

An automation that writes and draws is the latest invention exhibited by Maskelyne, the London sleight-of-hand performer, whose mechanical chess player was not long made the subject of magazine articles. Previous figures of this kind were only able to go through with a certain succession of movements, but Zoo, as he calls it, writes any sentence or makes any picture suggested by the audience. It is certain that there is a secret operator, but how the figure is controlled is a mystery. The performance is thus described by the London Times: "Mr. Maskelyne submits to examination a mill stand, the top supported by a single wooden pillar. This light stand is then placed upon the stage, and is isolated from the floor cloth by squares of plate glass, first inspected by the audience, and then, without possibility of substitutions laid one under each foot of the table Zoo, is in sitting attitude, and if she could stand up would be about four and a half feet in stature. She is carried round for any person to test by her weight the fact that she is a hollow doll fitted with light mechanism, and cannot possibly be a shell holding a diminutive human being. She is placed on the top of the little table, with her back to the audience. An easel, supported by a bracket, holds upright before her a drawing board with paper, and a crayon is held between her wax finger and thumb."

The multiplication of 987,654,321 by 45 44,444,444,445. Reversing the order of the digits and multiplying 123,456,789 by 45 we get the result equally curious, 5,555,555,505. If we take 123,456,789 as the multiplicand, and interchanging the figures of 45, take 54 as the multiplier, we obtain another remarkable product, 6,666,666,606. Returning to the multiplication first used, 987,654,321, and taking 54 as the multiplier again, we get 53,333,333,334—all three except the first and last figures, which read together 54, the multiplier. Taking the same multiplicand and using 27, the half of 54, as the multiplier, we get a product of 26,666,666,667—all sixes except the first and last figures, which read together 27, the multiplier. Next interchanging the figures in the number 27, and using 72 as the multiplier with 987,654,321 as the multiplicand, we obtain a product of 71,111,111,112 all ones except the first and last figures, which read together give 72, the multiplier.

Equally curious results may be obtained by multiplying these digits, written either way, by 9 or by the figures composing the multiples of nine variously interchanging.

A pamphlet by M. Lasarewski, which has been issued from the Russian Ministry of the Interior, gives a formidable account of the ravages of wolves, from which it appears that in European Russia alone about 200,000 of these beasts are harbored, a number which shows an increase rather than a diminution during the last decade. In the three years ending in 1851 125 persons were killed by the wolves, and in 1875 161 persons met their death from the same cause. Official reports show that every year about 150,000 head of large animals and 500,000 head of small fall victims to these marauders; but these numbers are inadequate, since much destruction is wrought which is not officially reported. The female wolves nourish their young on fowl, and in the one government of Kasan they dispose of some 11,000 geese annually; besides this, they kill at least 100,000 dogs in the same time, and altogether cost European Russia about 50,000,000 roubles per annum.

A reception by the Sultan is spoken of as having guests of officers in the national costume dotted about the splendid hall, in attitudes of the deepest humility, their eyes cast down, their arms crossed, and taking care always to face the Sultan, wherever he might be. The highest officials carry themselves before him in the most abject manner, like crouching slaves.

—Lightning struck an umbrella in North Carolina and killed three persons who were under it. It was a borrowed umbrella.

Ayer's Hair Vigor
For restoring to Gray Hair its natural Vitality and Color.
A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. It soon restores faded or gray hair to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed; but such as remain can be saved by this application, and stimulated into activity, so that a new growth of hair is produced. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. The restoration of vitality it gives to the scalp arrests and prevents the formation of dandruff, which is often so uncleanly and offensive. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous, and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit, but not harm it. If wanted merely for a HAIR DRESSING, nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre, and a grateful perfume.

Medical.
Dr. I. J. Martin's STANDARD FAMILY MEDICINES.
THESE truly valuable Medicines have most of them been before the public for over thirty years, and wherever they have been introduced, have acquired a high reputation. The extensive experience of the Proprietor, enables him to place before the community GOOD and RELIABLE FAMILY MEDICINES, such as need only a fair trial to become fully appreciated. They are composed of the PUREST MATERIALS, selected with great care, and combined in accordance with the most recent discoveries in Pharmacy and Chemistry, and in the most accurate manner.
A large number of the most reliable certificates could be produced in testimony of their virtues, but the proprietor is unwilling to rest them upon their own intrinsic merits. It is no small praise that many intelligent physicians have given them their entire approbation.
