On the day of the trial, she came into court with her vail down, and, while her lawyer was laying her grief before the jury, nobody paid particular attention. After a while she came on the witness stand and began to testify. Then she took off her vail, and the effect was wonderful. The attorney for the defense fell in love with her at the first glance, and, when he came to cross-examine her, he asked her questions which helped her to himself on his front and middle legs, make out Mr. Hay to be the hardest- he throws his hind legs rapidly hearted scoundrel on the continent. -- We stopped several hours at Nicolosi, in the house of the principal proprictor of the place. To amuse us he proposed that his daughter, some five or six years old, should recite some stanzas from Tasso's "Geruselamme Liberata." In a few moments a vivacious little creature, with jet-black eyes glowing like live coals, costumed in the Sicilian fashion, entered. She courtesied us with the elegance of a princess, and at a nod from her father threw herself into a dramatic attitude and began the recitation of the first canto of the poem, "Canto l'arme pictose," &c. The first thing that struck me was the melody of her voice and the perfect mastery she seemed to have over its intonation. Her tiny body quivered with emotion, for her whole soul was concentrated on the recitation. As she stood on a tripod stool in the centre of the room, ber eyes flaming with rage at the wrongs and sufferings of the Christians, dripping with tears as she recounted the pathetic portions of the poetic narrative, and then lifting her voice into swelling and exul-

Never was I so moved and excited by an oral recitation as by this bronze-faced, black-eyed little Sicilian, whose nature partook of the volcanic properties of the fiery atmosphere in which she had been reared, for she was born in the midst of molten lava and the smoke and fire of Etna. The recitation continued without a break for half an hour and more. The beauty of the child, the dramatic effect she gave to every word, the hidden beauties she brought to light, the pathetic and touching tones of her voice, and the perfect understanding she had of the author and the abandon with which she Sprecher's, gave herself up to her task, electrified us to such a degree that we took no note of the lapse of time. For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping-Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption. Among the great discoveries of modof more real value to mankind than this effectual remedy for all diseases timony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact, that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affecother medicine. The most dangerous inec-tions of the Pulmonary Organs yield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a rem-edy it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forgungers of more serious disaggerit rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attacks of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender ble, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence; and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, CHERRY
