

—One of the most pleasing scenes in American history is the picture of Franklin at the court of France, in his blue and white stockings and shoes and yet with his simple dignity, commanding the reverence and respect of the bedazzled crowd of courtiers and nobles. A correspondent of the Boston Transcript thus describes the scene. "The kissing of the queen is an incident new to us: "Franklin, I understand, was dressed in second-rate home spun yarn stockings, substantial shoes, and his hair of his native color, not a conscious of an inferiority, however, but with that self-possession which is the distinguishing trait of well-bred people everywhere. His native dignity was his sole decoration. As a stranger he must have observed a common practice in France, of kissing, even in the streets, and other places, when first met after a short or long absence, without regard to the sex. This kissing, however, is no more than our shaking hands, and is performed by applying one cheek to another—once, twice, or more, according to the intimacy and feeling. It may be called cheek-by-lookng. Franklin may not have observed intently the modus of this practice, but he thought that a kiss was a kiss, or not thought at all about it. It is said that he was reminded by one of the court that when he was presented he must kiss the queen, who it was also said was a very kissable woman. The queen approached familiarly and very near—probably impelled by curiosity to see well this handsome stranger, Franklin, remembering his lesson, without reluctance put it into practice, in the only way he had ever been taught to kiss, and gave the queen a mighty buss on the lips, to the great amazement and horror of the old maids, but to the great amusement of all others, especially the queen, who was delighted with the savage simplicity, and it is said that she called out, "Ecor his, da caps," or "Do it again." Another correspondent of the Transcript communicates the following from the "Memoires Secrets de Marie Antoinette par Madame Campan:" "While I was in the Senate (said General Shields) I saw much of Webster both in and out of the Capitol. One day he got into difficulty with some of his constituents, some Quakers, who are distinguished by my advocacy of a certain measure, and they have sent a large delegation down here from Massachusetts to make a protest. I have promised to meet them this evening, and I would like to have you there." "Why, what can I do?" "Your native blarney, Shields—it may help me out of the trouble." "I laughed at the idea of blarney effecting anything where Daniel Webster's eloquence could not convince, and I made that objection, but he insisted, and I proposed to go on hand. Evening came, and I joined Mr. Webster at his rooms. Presently the delegation arrived and were seated, a dozen or twenty of the most solemn men I have ever seen, all rigidly costumed in Quaker dress. Without wasting any time the chairman arose and addressed Mr. Webster in a set speech. He commented severely upon the course of the Senator as to the measure in question, setting forth the bad effect which it might have on their sect, expressing great sorrow and surprise that Mr. Webster had been found supporting such a bill, and concluded with a vigorous protest in writing, which bore many signatures. Webster listened attentively with unchanged countenance, and when the spokesman had resumed his seat he arose and replied. He spoke half an hour, and before he concluded he grew as eloquent as he was often heard. "His defense was simply that he deemed the measure out of the interests of the whole country, although it might not be specially adapted to the wants and interests of any sect, and after clearly setting this forth he addressed an appeal to the delegation to remember that they were Americans, as well as Quakers, that I was fairly electrified. The effect produced by his words on the delegation was astonishing. When he began they were all seated; after he had spoken ten minutes one after another rose to his feet, until they were all standing; then they commenced to move toward him, and they had soon surrounded him in a body. Before he finished I saw the chairman take out his petition and tear it to pieces; and when he had finished some of them were already tearing and all were grasping Webster's hands as fast as they could get them. "Friend Webster," cried the spokesman, "this is right and we are wrong; we owe thee an apology; we will say no more about it; thee knows thy duty better than we." "The next day I met Mr. Webster, and with a countenance of perfect gravity he said, "Well, Shields—now didn't we blarney thee fellows nicely?"

—There is a young man in Brooklyn, named Thomas Mulvaney, said to be a good looking, intelligent, and an architectural student, who is anxious to be the first person to commit suicide by jumping off the Brooklyn tower of the bridge now in course of erection. Indeed, so determined is he to accomplish his object that his relatives are obliged to keep guard over him in his own house, a brother and cousin watching alternately in watching. Though closely watched, he will be saved. Mulvaney is a man of pleasing address and rare conversational power, and when visited by a reporter a few days ago he was sitting by a window gazing straight away at where the tower that fascinates him looms up against the sky. In reply to a question for desiring to commit suicide by means of the terrifically high tower, he said simply, "Ever since I was up there last fall it has been the one idea of my life—and death. I would have done it if then had it not been for a friend who was with me. When I got to the ground and looked up again I was ready to curse myself for not having accomplished my purpose." "Will you let me go to the tower, and do it yet?" he asked. "No," he said, "it is what makes me so angry at my folks for keeping me cooped up here. If they were not my blood relatives, and if my mother was not in the house, I would force my way out. As sure as you see that tower there, so sure will somebody anticipate me in the grand plunge if I am to be kept a prisoner. The thought is terrible." He is engaged to be married to a young lady of culture, who is now absent at a watering place and is not aware of his intentions. His relatives intend bringing him to a friend's house in Baltimore city, and if his absence from the sight of the tower does not cure him of his desire, to commit suicide he will then be taken to a private asylum.

Dr. I. J. Martin's

STANDARD

FAMILY MEDICINES.

THESE truly valuable Medicines have for most of them been before the public for over thirty years, and wherever they have been introduced, have acquired a high reputation. The extensive experience of the Proprietor, enables him to place before the community good and RELIABLE FAMILY MEDICINES, such as need only a fair trial to become fully appreciated. They are composed of the PUREST MATERIALS, selected with great care, and combined in accordance with the most recent discoveries in Pharmacy and Chemistry, and in the most accurate manner.

A large number of the most reliable certificates could be produced in testimony of their virtues, but the Proprietor is willing to rest them upon their own intrinsic merits. It is no small praise that many intelligent physicians have given their entire approbation.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care. Its effects are as wonderful and as satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff. It gives the head a cooling, soothing sensation of great comfort, and the scalp by its use becomes white and clean. By its tonic properties it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness, and making the hair grow thick and strong. As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable. A. A. Hayes, M. D., State Assayer of Massachusetts, says, "The constituents are pure, and carefully selected for excellent quality; and I consider it the BEST PREPARATION for its intended purposes."

Price, One Dollar.

Buckingham's Dye

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade, to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

THERE IS NO USE "WAITING"

For something to turn up, and we have at last decided to turn it up. The protracted warm spell has materially interfered with the CLOTHING BUSINESS of Baltimore. Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth, which reasonable merchants would have sold, remain on shelf and counter. It is usual in most business houses to make reductions after the season's demand is over. We have decided to take time by the forelock and make those reductions NOW. Hence our entire stock has been marked down, DOWN, DOWN to an attractive holiday basis. We will positively stick at no reasonable sacrifice that will turn our great stock into speedy CASH.
