Harpers Magazine for September. Harpers Magazine for September is distinguished not only for the beauty of its illustrations, but also for its nearly one hundred and the interest which attaches to every article in its contents, but also by its remarkable variety of subjects.

For those interested in art, there is Mrs. Helen S. Canant's well-considered and interesting paper on the Domestic and Artistic Life of Titian, with seventeen effective engravings.

Especially timely are the three papers devoted to commercial and industrial interests. The first of these, entitled The Lading of a Ship, is a beautifully illustrated article, not only interesting to the general reader, but also to the shipping community.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the British corn trade, says the striking feature in the home market is the thinness of the wheat plant on the ground, and an examination shows them to be poorly filled, and bearing distinct traces of blight and mildew.

Some very nice points of equity will come up before the Fisheries Commission which is about to decide whether Great Britain is entitled to any compensation for the alleged suspension of the advantages which she has received over America since the treaty of 1871.

Under the order of the Circuit Court for Baltimore County, the Undersigned, Trustee, will offer for sale, at Public Auction, on the premises, on

The Department of State is running a magnificent race, conducted by Hamilton Fish in imitation of the British Foreign Office. After the Alabama claims treaty, which cost England a good deal more money than the indemnity, for greasing the wheels at Washington, the old simple ways were rejected, which had always made that department a model of dignity, and which had sufficed for all the strain of the rebellion.

When peace came, and the actual business was reduced to a fractional part of what had previously existed, Mr. Fish found no means of organizing a department which had met all the requirements of an abnormal condition. Not to with Don Hamilton Fish. He must have more grandeur. They had learned how the Foreign Office in Downing street was got up, and they set to work on that pattern.

At this time Mr. Everts is taking his case in Vermont, and two of the Assistant Secretaries, with a number of lesser lights, are wandering about. It has been necessary to call in outside aid, and Mr. George E. Baker, recently Comptroller and striking feature in the home market, is doing the work of these absentees, and is by no means distressed by his burden.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the British corn trade, says the striking feature in the home market is the thinness of the wheat plant on the ground, and an examination shows them to be poorly filled, and bearing distinct traces of blight and mildew.

Although the platform of the Ohio Republicans was shaped by the hand of Stanley Matthews, it is an open secret that it was planned at Washington at a free conference with Hayes, Sherman, and other managers. The Communistic plank was inserted in the desperate hope of catching labor votes, just as a sectarian school question was injected into the Republican canvass in Ohio two years ago, without a pretext to justify any form of agitation on that subject, since the Constitution of Ohio protects the schools against all possible danger.

West, the Republican nominee for Governor, who represents this atrocious idea, and who boldly proclaims a theory which would overturn society, is now known to have been the personal choice of Hayes from the beginning. In fact, the whole canvass, platform, candidate, and Communistic war, all concerted at Washington, when Stanley Matthews was called there, just prior to the meeting of the Cleveland Convention.

Hayes's Cabinet is always attempting to whip the devil around the stump. The country has been solemnly assured that no discrimination was to be made, "even in favor of those highest in authority," in the civil service pretence of taking the officeholder out of politics. But Secretary Sherman interprets this order so that he can make public speeches in the Ohio canvass on the subject of the proposed Schurz interpretation to that effect, and Secretary Schurz interprets it so that he can make public speeches in the Ohio canvass on the subject of the proposed Schurz interpretation.

The Russian Caucasus is the Tower of Babel, the point of pilgrimage of the Fire Worshipers, and the center of the world beyond the era of Mohammedanism. The pilgrims are now few in number. The residents of the tower are earnest advocates of the faith, together with sundry disciples of Zoroaster. Their worship, costumes and ceremonies are precisely as in ancient times. The tower has no windows. The interior is reached only by subterranean passages. It is a immense building and is surrounded by high wall. Within this wall and encircling the tower are high columns of flange, which spring from the earth and are made with the naphtha that is found in large quantities in the surrounding soil of the mountains. These fires are kept perpetually burning.

The workingmen's party has found its leader. Barkis F. Butler is willing. He is a champion of experience, and in his time has endured many hard knocks. A better free lance than Butler it would be hard to find, but he has not dugged in sun spots, and the weather of the earth. Dr. Hunter, Director General of Statistics in India, whose views on the matter have been noticed, has lately contributed some new information on the subject. His researches embrace the records of sixty-four years at Madras. The cyclo-revolution and decrease of sun spots is taken at eleven years, and within each of these eleven-year periods, a minimum of rainfall, forty inches, occurs in the last, first and second years, the maximum, fifty-four inches, in the fifth and sixth years. Taking the whole period, the five years of minimum sun spots have had an average of only thirty seven inches rainfall, less by eleven and a-half inches than the average of the locality. Six severe famines have taken place during the sixty-four years, caused by the droughts of the minimum years, the six droughts each occurring during the last, first or second year of an eleven year-period.

Detectives at Pittsburg are actively engaged in recovering the goods stolen from the footed cars and depot of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. The property forms a singular collection, embracing boots and shoes, a complete wood-carving, cushions, mattresses, spitsoons, framed time-cards, an encyclopedia, forty barrels of flour—each minus a baking or two—a three and 1/2 barrels of lard, 300 hams, kegs and barrels of whiskey and highwines, glassware, hardware, shovels and picks, bales of wool, a complete Jersey wagon, leather, rope, bundles and barrels of leaf tobacco, kettles, hoes, wax, oatmeal, boxes of foot rules, tin chimneys, colic-mills, gas-stoves, place-car furniture, sewing machines, carpets, oil-cloths, muslin, ready made clothing, yarn, harnesses, whips, flags and the like. Seven Saratoga trunks full of clothing were found in one house and eleven barrels of flour in another. Eye-witnesses of the riot tell of auctions where circular saws three feet in diameter sold for fifty cents, and a car load of sewing-machines brought from one dollar to ten cents.

Senator Lamar hit the nail upon the head and spoke to the purpose when he told the Democrats of Mississippi that "questions of tariff, trade, commerce, currency and transportation" were the coming questions of the day in this country. In saying this the eloquent Mississippi Senator spoke not for himself nor for his own State nor for his own party, but for the vast majority of sensible and patriotic Americans in all parts of the Union. His speech makes it perfectly clear, also, that the Democrats of the South have no intention whatever of allowing themselves to be diverted from the practical consideration of such questions into sterile discussions over legal issues. Perhaps it will be well for the front men at the North to have a patent to take note of this significant speech. Gradually it will come to be understood that the United States have been reconstituted at last, and that more than one section of the United States will hereafter concern itself effectively with the legislation and the policy of the whole republic.

Some very nice points of equity will come up before the Fisheries Commission which is about to decide whether Great Britain is entitled to any compensation for the alleged suspension of the advantages which she has received over America since the treaty of 1871. Great Britain claims fourteen and a-quarter million dollars for the twelve years' lease of the advantages which the treaty is likely to give to us. On the other hand, our Government argues that the privileges which the treaty offers are fully repaid, and that no monetary compensation should be demanded by other nations. The United States argument is that as we hold the bait and Great Britain the mackerel fisheries, and also give Canadian fishermen the right to bring fish and oil free into our ports. We have fully paid for the privilege of fishing within the three miles from shore boundary. There are also some legal questions to be decided as to the proper construction which ought to be placed upon certain clauses of the treaties of 1818 and 1871, but in the main the matter rests upon what the arbitrators shall consider to be reciprocal advantages. A compromise on these points is desirable, so that the rights of both parties may be preserved in their integrity, and that no opportunity may be afforded for evading them.
