

...through... Many... experience are ready... their acquaintance... with abruptness to the wife... my little rule things without considering them worth an apology. The stranger, whom they have seen but yesterday, is listened to with deference, and although the subject may not be the pleasantest nature, with a pleasant smile, while the poor wife, in her domestic attire, is smiling and listening to with unbecoming indifference. Oh, how wrong this is—all wrong.

Does she urge some... "Oh, don't bother me," cries her husband. "You see, she asks for necessary funds for Sister's shoes or Tommy's hat—Seems to me you're always wanting money?" Is the handsome fellow, in any little extra wanted by his masculine appetite, it is ordered and not requested. "Look here, I want you to do so and so—just see that it is done," and off marches Mr. Boor with a bow and a smile of friendly sneer for every casual acquaintance he may meet.

When we meet with such thoughtless and coarse, our thoughts revert to the kind voice and gentle manner of the friend who said, "Yes, my dear, with pleasure." "I beg your pardon," comes readily to his lips, when, by any little awkwardness he has disconnected her, as it would in the presence of the most fashionable stickler for etiquette. He loves her best—why should he hesitate to show her, by preferring her pleasure and honoring her in public as well as in private? Though words seem little things, and slight attempts almost valueless, yet depend upon it they keep the flame alive, especially if they are natural. The children grow up in a better atmosphere, and learn to respect their parents as they see them respecting each other. May a boy take advantage of a mother he loves, because he sees the rudeness of his father. "Only his mother—why should he thank her—father never does." Thus, the home becomes the seat of disorder and unhappiness. Only for strangers are kind words expressed, and hypocrites go out from the hearthstone prepared to render justice and politeness to everyone but they who have the most just claims. Ah, give us the kind glances, the happy household of the friend who said so pleasantly, "Yes, my dear, with pleasure."

A Greek Wedding.

Wedding amongst the Greeks are for the most part solemnized in the evening and at home, and the nature of the rite, must be very trying to the persons principally concerned. A small table is placed in the centre of the room, on one side of which stand the bride and the bridegroom, each holding a long lighted candle on the opposite side of the officiating priest. Behind the bride the best man takes his place; he has an important part to fill in the ceremony, and is ranked as a relation from the time of the marriage. The room is of course brilliantly lighted, and the numerous guests, thronging as closely as they can towards the centre in order to gain a better view. Many prayers are said by the priest and assisted by the choir, and the ears of a classical scholar, with the exception of the oft-repeated "Kyrie Eleison," which forms so prominent a part in almost every Greek service.
