an Adriondack trout;-

At the very first east I saw that the hour had come. Three trout leaped into the air. The danger of this manaver all fisherman understand; it is one of the commonest in the woods, three heavy trout taking hold at once, rushing in A. M. different directions, smash the tackle into flinders. I evaded this catch, and threw again. I recall the moment. A hermit thrush on the tip of a balsam uttered his long, liquid evening note. Happening to look over my shoulder, I saw the peak of Marcy gleam rosy in the sky (I can't help it that Marcy is fifty miles off, and cannot be seen from the region; these incidental touches are always used). The hundred feet of silk swished through the air, and the tail fly fell as lightly on the water as a three cent piece (which no slamming will give the weight of a 10) drops upon the contribution plate. Instantly there was a rush, a swirl; I struck; and "Got him, by---!" Never mind what Luke said I got him by. "Out of the fly!" continued the irreverent guide, but I told him to back water and make for the centre of the lake. The trout as soon as it felt the prick of the hook, was off like a shot, and took out the whole of the line with a rapidity that made it smoke. "Give him the butt!" shouted Luke-

It is the usual remark in such an emergency. I gave him the butt, and, recognizing the fact and my spirit, the trout at once sunk to the bottom and sulked. It is the most dangerous mood of a trout, for you cannot tell what he will do next. We reeled up a little, and waited five minutes for him to reflect. A tightening of the line enraged hin, and he soon developed his tactics. Coming to the surface, he made straight for the boat faster than I could reel in, and evidently with hostile intentions. "Look out for him!" cried Luke as he came flying in the air.

ment the evil-minded fish, lashing the $25 OVERCOATS MARKED DOWN TO $21.00 water in his rage, was coming back again, making straight for the boat as before. Luke who was used to those encounters, Everything under $15 " travellers he had accompanied, raised his paddle in self-defence. The trout left the water about ten feet from the boat and came directly at me, with fiery eyes, his speckled sides flashing like a meteor. I dodged, as he whisked by with a vicious slap of his bifurcated tail, and nearly upset the boat. The line was of course their wants. slack, and the danger was that he would entangle it about me and carry away a leg. This was evidently his game. But ton or two by the swiftly moving string.

The trout plunged into the water with a hissing count. hissing sound, and went away again with all the line on the reel. More Butt. More indignation on the part of the cap-

The contest had been going on for half an hour and I was getting exhausted. We 3 had been back and forth across the Lake, and round and round the lake; what I feared was that the trout would run up the inlet and wreck us in the bushes. But he had a new fancy, and began the execution of a manoever which I had never read of. Instead of coming straight towards me he took a large circle, swimming rapidly, and gradually contracting his orbit. I reeled in and kept my eye on him. Round and round he went, narrowing his circle. I began to suspect the game, which was to twist my head off. When he had reduced the radius of his circle to about twenty-five feet, he struck a tremendous pace through the water. It would be false modesty in a sportsman to say that I was not equal to the occasion. Instead of turning round with him as he expected, I stepped to the bow, braced myself, and FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY let the boat swing. Round went the fish, and round we went like a top. I saw a line of Mount Marcys all round the hori- ANNE ARUNDEL AND HOWARD COUNzon. The rosy tint in the west made a broad band of pink along the sky above | Chartered by the Legislature in 1868 the tree-tops. The evening star was a pertect circle of light, a hoop of gold in the heavens. We recled, and whirled, and heavens. I was to insure at the lowest possible rates. willing to give the malicious beast butt, and line, and all, if he would only go the other way for a change.

When I came to myself, Luke was gaffing the trout at the boat side. After we got him in and dressed him he weighed three-quarters of a pound.
