WHY SHOULD I ATTEND THE GRANGE MEETINGS?-A question of some importance is this. If no actual tangible benefit is derived it is simply a waste of time, and time is too valuable to be thus squandered. I do not doubt in the land upon whom their membership has conferred no direct benefit because they seldom if ever attend the meetings.

their occupation.

When we reflect upon the wonderful changes wrought in the medical world since the days when the pulverized flesh of dried vipers was the principal ingredient in a prescription, by combinations or associate research, we will not feel surprised that like results should be realized in soil culture.

Improvements in the modes of tillage will necessarily be followed by corresponding improvement in the tillers.

The social and intellectual condition of the farmer was never so high as it now is, his advancement in knowledge and true refinement never so rapid as more prompt payments -- general prosper- indigestible. ity. Directly, the grange benefits to me have been a better acquaintance with my brethren; a better understanding of their peculiarities of character, the dispersion of prejudices, the formation of friendships, which I trust will continue through life; and it may be some progress in selfculture. And last and least I have saved pecuniarity a trifle, which if saved by all the men. Is would amout in the aggregate to a lage sum, and throughout the whole order to many millions of dollars.

I had hoped to learn more about farming, but owing either to my inaptitude, or to the failure of the grange to discusss questions purely of an agricultural character, I have not in this respect realized

Petroleum-An Old Wonder. You who have chanced to see petroleum lu its crude and native state - dark colored, thick, rank, and viscid - can understand the appearance of the contents of the "phial" submitted to the old-time editor. "Natural Bitumen .- We have received a phial of a fluid matter which has the appearance of tar, and of which we have the following account: The well that produces this bitumen lies about seventy miles west of Cumberland Gap, in Wayne County, Kentucky, on the Big South Fork of Cumberland River, and throws up between three and four hundred gallons in twenty-four hours. The bitumen has not yet been analyzed, and, of course, 70 its value is not at present ascertained." And that which so interested the edi-

The man did not then know, and haps there are those of the present who do not know, that the petroleum, or coaloil of the great coal regions of America is identical with the native bitumen of the ancients. It is not our purpose to go into a disquisition on the origin of petroleum. The thought in my mind, when I took up my pen, was of the little phial in the sanctum of the Richmond Enquirer seven and fifty years ago, and of the status of the same substance to day. Then "the bitumen had not yet been analyzed, and its value not accertained." The growth of its product has been marvellous. The production of petroleum in the whole country tion of petroleum in the whole country lands of William A. Lemmon and David E. Hopkins, and being about 1½ miles from Listwenty dollars per barrel.
