CONGRESS AND A DEMOCRATIC UNITED STATES SENATOR.

A new congres is to be cleeted; a body that may have to decide the most momentous question which can ever arise in our national affairs, namely who shall will be the grave responsibility east upon tered suit in the City Court for libel authorities of Port Deposit hereby notify the next Congress in the event of no election by the people in 1880. With a Republican Senate and a Republican President, the only wonder is that a Democratic Congress has achieved so much in favor of retreachments and good government. In former times the United States Senate was regarded as the most able dignified, and important legislative body in the world. The extent to which it has proved to be very disorderly. Several depreciated in public esteem, because heads and broken noses. One colored its roll of membership contained so many Republican carpet-baggers and spoilsmen, I need not expatiate upon at this the South was as destructive as the at the third attempt the pistol went off, the South was as destructive as the plague at this time, depopulating many of the rowdies; the fourth shot went of her fairest and most important cities. nearly purged of its worst elements, the not trouble the negro further, but scatthe Empire State, with her five million rant they drank beer and whisky ad limipopulation, her great industries, her immense enterprises, her cast business interests, extending over every State of our Union, shall be represented in the United States Senate by two sterling Democrats, whose votes on all important measures will represent the views of the great majority of her people; or whether we are to have in the future (as at present) one Republican an one Democratic that, to all intents and purposes, our they can. It is understood that the great State will not be represented at all in that illustrious body.

In order to secure the election of a Democratic United States Senator it is necessary that we have a large majority in the Assembly. With a view to the election of a Republican United States Senator in 1879, the Republicans, last fall, elected a decided majority of the members of the present Senate.

IMPORTANCE OF HARMONY.

If Democrats are in carnest, and desire to ovorcome this majority on joint ballot, it behooves them to see to it that not so much as one Assembly district be lost to the Democratic party by reason of feuds or quarrels or differences of any kind. Every Democrat throughout the State should, by all honest and honorable means work to insure success, as if the entire result depended upon his individual exertions. The loss of a single Democratic vote may lose an Assembly district. For the want of one additional Democratic Assemblyman's vote the Legislature, on said publication—and that the plaintiff joint ballot, may fail to elect a Democratic United States Senator. No one can measure the consequences which may the plaintiff claims $5,000 damages. flow from the apathy or neglect of duty on the part of a single Democratic voter. Not many years since a Democratic Governor was elected in one of the Eastern States by a majority of one. The Electoral Commission by a majority of one in effect, decided that the present de facto incumbent of the Presidential office had a majority of one electoral vote. Let every Democrat voter exert himself as though his vote would result in a majority of one in favor of every Democratic candidate for whom he casts a ballot. In view of the momentous interests at stake in the coming election, I hope-I sincerely trust -that all Democrats, in every part of the State, will heal up divisions among themselves; close up the ranks and press on to party. The only question is whether the Democratic party will be guilty of the stupendous folly—the downright insani- lumbia tr-of defeating itself. By be the last one the nefarious conduct of Returning Boards, and for the reason that a majority of the Electoral Commission shut their eyes to actual facts, and would not permit the truth to be proved, the great majority of the people of the United States, who had lawfully elected a President and a Vice President, were cheated out of their choice, and, to all intents and purto the minority. Those who brought this result acted upon the same principle which governed Tweed and his confederates in crime, in the palmy days of repeating, ballot-box stuffing and false counting. When other attempts at fraud failed, they gave the votes of the victorious candidate to his opponent who had been defeated at the polls, and thereupon certified that he had been elected.
