Old "Mansion House."

An Hour with General McKaig-Recollections of Men and Events. Midway between Hagerstown and Sharpssburg, on the National road, stands the know how liable liquors are to be adulstately old mansion built by Colonel Frisby Tilghman when this country was in its infancy. It is a historic house, occupied by

THE MANSION HOUSE, which is of stone, two stories in height, and capped by a roof resembling a pyramid. A spacious central doorway opens upon a wide hall the full length of the house. In this hall McClellan wrote letters, received and sent dispatches, planned his battle with Lee and—played euchre. From the left of the house shoots out a conservatory filled with rare plants. Hedgerows of hawthorn inclose the well-kept grounds which are adorned by parks and well arranged walks. In the distance is South Mountain, looking as grim and gloomy as did Stonewall Jackson when he saluted it on his way from Frederick. Here would Wordsworth feel himself inspired to make a stanza on nature.

HISTORY. I found General McKaig sitting in the doorway smoking a pipe presented to him by Andrew Jackson in 1837.

Said I: 'General, if memories of her most worthy citizens are the best wealth of a State so are they material for a newspaper man. Your life must be a book of no mean dimensions. Let us open it. You're a native of Ohio, are you not ?"

"Yes, I was born in Ohio in November, 1804. I came to Cumberland in 1826. It was then a town of eleven hundred inhabitants. My first work there was to teach in the Academy, at the head of which I continuad for eight years. When I took it in 1826 I had fifteen scholars and the fifteen were pretty much of one family. I left it in a flourishing condition with a hundred pupils. In those days you could buy land in and around Cumberland for a mere song. I bought some and to-day it is worth about one hundred times the price I paid and times are dull."

"When were you admitted to the bar ?" "In 1931. John V. L. McMahon was then a lawyer of 12 years' standing and in ber 1st, 1879: his prime. Meeting him one day I said to him, 'Mac, I have been admitted to the bar and I propose using the law as a road city; to fortune rather than as a stepping stone to what you call fame, name and political preferment.' 'It would be wiser, McKaig,' said he, 'to use it for both ends.' "

"Was McMahon fond of fame?" "Well, yes; but free from vanity. His was a lofty, a holy ambition. I shall never forget one occurrence. One day he and I were in Frostburg stopping at a tavern; an old farmer, a friend of mine, came in and I introduced him to Mr. McMahon. 'What McMahon?' 'Why, John V. L. Mc-Mahon.' 'I knew Billy McMahon (John's father) very well, but I never heard of John V. L. McMabon.' 'There, Mac,' said Poor Mac! he was the greatest man, the greatest lawyer and orator I ever knew and I knew Webster well and Clay and Calhoun, Prentiss, Benton and Hayne. within the presidential gift."

"What was that one?"

I was lowing chivalric address was very be one of the peace commissioners sent by somely delivered the Legislature to the Confederate Congress in Alabama. Coleman Yeliott was another. We were three, sent by the Legislature. I found Davis full of big notions about the power of his government. I came away thinking him the last man in the world for the place he had. I made a half-hour's speech before him and his cabinet and told them they would be beaten flat to the ground; that but a short time would be needed to prove it; that the South would be starved while the North would have the world to draw supplies from. But no use; Davis saw things through a large microscope. Since the war I have looked after my business and attended to my own law matters." "Who, by the way, is the ablest lawyer you know nowadays, General?" "Well, Sir, I have tried cases with and against Reverdy Johnson, Henry Winter Davis, Clement Vallandigham, William Walsh, and others, not to speak of Mc-Mahon, and with the exception of the last named, Ex-Congressman Walsh is not only the best lawyer I know but the best I ever knew. That man was born a lawyer, yet he is as modest as a maiden of sixteen. Walsh, Sir, is a second edition of Daniel Dulaney, and Charles O'Conor agrees with me. Read his briefs, hear his arguments and you, young man, will learn something; but he is no politician and it's a pity. We need such men to purity."

FAMILY HISTORY. The General married a daughter of Colonel Frisby Tilghman, who built 'Rockland House," already described. When he died the stately mansion went out of the family but General McKaig bought it and his wife is now at the home of her childhood. Her grandfather was a cousin of Colonel Tench Tilghman, Washington's private secretary and aid-de-camp. No man of Revolutionary times was so near Washington's heart, not even "Light Horse Harry." In fact, the "father of his country" esteemed Tench Tilghman so highly that he confided his secrets to him and after the war, when Colonel Tilghman resided in Baltimore, he transacted Washington's business for him. He bought his wine and laces for Mrs. Washington. If Washington never told a lie he sometimes drank a drop. Here is a letter addressed to Colonel Tench Tilghman:

An Exciting Bridge Accident. A large wagon, drawn by six horses and carrying a die block weighing six tons, broke through the bridge over the Patapsco at Woodstock Tuesday afternoon. The die block was one of several large stones quarried in Baltimore county, near the Howard line, for the pedestals of the lions to be placed on the new Calvertstreet bridge in Baltimore city. The bridge has frame sides and top, girders, and is 25 feet above the water. The wagon wheels crushed through the flooring, but caught on an iron brace, where the weight of the stone broke the wagon, and the great block of granite fell into the stream. Mr. James Carey, owner and driver of the team, whipped up his horses, cut the traces and saved them by the exercise of great presence of mind and courage. About twenty feet of the flooring of the bridge were carried away, and only the side timbers and girders on top saved the structure from being totally wrecked. The floor went down under the horses step by step. Great excitement prevailed in the neighborhood for some time. Robberies. - The past week or two has been prolific with petty robberies in different portions of our county. On Thursday of last week an attempt was made to enter the residence of Mr. George Dobbin, on Lawyers' Hill, at Relay House, but the thieves were frightened off by a female servant. Accidents. -On Sunday alternoon last, Miss Emily Dugan, daughter of Cumberto Hehester. When about to cross a bridge over a small stream they encountered a Mr. Atkinson attempted to back off the bridge, when the carriage immediately upapon her. She was at once taken up in an unconscious condition and carried to the residence of her father, near by, when Dr. W. E. Hodges, of this city, was summoned and found that her thigh was fractured, her arm badly bruised and that she had also sustained injuries about her head. Dr. Macgill, of Catonsville, assisted in adjusting the fracture and Miss Dugan is in a much improved condition.

Miss Miranda Selby, 80 years of age, is lying in a critical condition at the residence of her nephew, at the Union Mills, from injuries received by falling through a porch on Monday afternoon. While standing on the porch with an infant in her arms the floor beneath her suddenly gave way and precipitated her and the child to the ground, a distance of 15 feet. The infant escaped with a few slight scratches, but Miss Selby's spine was seriously injured and, owing to her advanced age, Dr. Wm. II. Hodges, the attendant physician, entertains slight hopes of her recovery.

On Monday night last whilst Mr. Wil son, keeper of the second toll-gate, west of this city, on the Frederick pike, was returning home from Baltimore, his horse became frightened just beyond the gate kept by Mr. Jones, and he was precipitated over an embankment into the small stream running beside the road at this point, and severely injured. Dr. Owings was sent for and gave the required medical attention. Mr. Wilson has been removed home, and is now under the treatment of Dr. Riggs, his regular physician.

About So'clock Tuesday evening, Robert Schleisinger fell from the highest part of the wall between the race of the Patapsco flour mill and the Frederick turnpike into the race and was carried by the water down to the mill, where he was rescued in an unconscious condition. He was conveyed to a house near by and was with great difficulty resuscitated.

On Monday morning last whilst Mr. McShane was driving from his residence to Dorsey's run, near Elysville, the horse attached to his vehicle became frightened and plunged over a high embankment. Mr. McShane by a timely leap saved his life. The buggy was completely demolished and the horse badly injured.

Grand Parade and Pic-Nic.

Pythian Division No. 1, uniform rank, K. of P. commanded by Capt. J. J. Kahler, will be present, and have a grand parade. The G. K. of R. & S., James Whitehouse, will deliver an address at 3 o'clock P. M. Prof. Weber's Band of Baltimore, has been engaged for the occasion. All the usual amusements will be afforded, including dancing, tenpins, prize shooting, &c. Dinner and refreshments can be had on the grounds, but no intoxicating liquors will be sold. a sufficient number of offices will be present to preserve order, and everything will be done to make the occasion one of enjoyment to all. The public are cordially invited to attend. Dancing commence. at 9 o'clock A. M. and continues till 11 o'clock P. M. A special train will leave this city for Baltimore at 11 o'clock P. M. Alberton Items .- The Alberton

Manufacturing Co. has purchased from Messrs, Pool & Hunt, Baltimore, two new turbine water wheels of four bundred horse power. Two over-shot water wheels have been sacrificed to make room for this improvement, which will cost seven thousand dollars. Our school has been furnished with a lot of new desks of modern design for which the people are thankful, and moreso the forty-three young Albertonians who occupy them. The band is progressing in music and
