MR. COMPTON RENOMINATED.

The Laurel convention acted wisely in the renomination of Hon. Barnes Compton, and Mr. Compton's acceptance, even though against his original avowed inclination, was a patriotic, yet after all we trust, pleasing duty.

The unanimity of southern Maryland's Democracy as expressed Wednesday must be particularly gratifying to Mr. Compton. Indeed any feelings of pride he may experience can justly and well be set down as pardonable. The sincerity of his fellow citizens was unmistakable, and, as one newspaper, although not disposed to be friendly to Mr. Compton, remarks, the gathering possessed more of the hearty cordiality of a neighbor's friendly meeting, than the stiff formality of a Congressional convention.

The gathering demonstrated Mr. Compton's popularity, one element of success in the approaching campaign.

His ability, a second element of success, has long been unquestioned. It has been the pleasurable duty of THE TIMES more than once to make this ability a topic of discussion, and the correctness of our conclusions has been attested by the consensus of the unbiased and truly metropolitan press and the judgment of every fair and intelligent man who has watched Mr. Compton's career.

No blunder mars his record, no blot is on his escutcheon, he has builded himself a monument more enduring than granite, and every block in which is zealous and honest fidelity to public trust. That he is an honest man, the noblest work of God, is a third element of success.

A fourth is the position which his experience in the House of Representatives has gained him. It is not enough that a member possess innate ability. The work of Congress is done by committees and if the member in question be assigned to insignificant committees he may not for the entire session obtain an opportunity to make himself or his talents felt. The older members are assigned to the more important committees, those that engage in the actual legislation. Mr. Compton's past terms of service now entitle him to the recognition accorded the leaders of the lower house, the men who have been in Congress anywhere from ten to twenty years, and who are, consequently, the most useful members. He is now in a position to shed luster upon his district and add to the already gained prestige of his State. Intelligent men realize this and on this ground, if on no other, would vote for Mr. Compton rather than for a raw Republican recruit who for two years would be learning the drill and would so soon as broken in be displaced by some one else, the district meanwhile suffering from not being represented by a man of experience.

These are four elements of Mr. Compton's success, and in themselves are sufficient to assure it.

But if assurance need be made doubly sure there is more than enough in the issues of the contest to do it. If Democrats could ever conjure from the traditions of their party and the faith of their fathers sufficient to bind them in indissoluble and impregnable union, surely they must in 1892, with the blighting touch of legalized robbery upon them, as conceived by McKinley, the arch-apostle of millionaire protection; and in the shadow of the force bill devised to destroy the autonomy of Maryland with other States south of Mason and Dixon's line.

A foretaste of what Republican domination would bring, if completely effected, was given this very district when its choice, the man who is now our candidate, was insolently ousted from the seat to which elected, by the tyrannical body at the head of which Tom Reed won the hateful name of Czar.

A menace yet lowers over it in a federal statute under which a Republican administration will this fall endeavor to flood the district with federal supervisors and deputy marshals to overawe American freemen. Those who remember the days of the reconstruction era, the days that tried men's souls, when voters marched to the polls under crossed bayonets, will, on the one question that the Republicans have again raised, plight their mutual troth, as when Maryland was rescued from thraldom just a quarter of a century ago, to stand together for their altars and their fires.

We are indulging no rhetorical fancy. We are solemnly in earnest. The present year may in future time be regarded as the most critical in our history since the government's foundation. War is not always the worst danger of government, for there may be every appeal to patriotism and counsels to vigilance become unnecessary. Let the United States be threatened from without by the navies of the world and she will remain as a billow-buffeted Gibraltar. But we have the melancholy tale of republics, whose memories only come from the wreck of ages, to teach us that the worst dangers of nations are frequently internal and insidious. The evils springing from them include fratricidal dissension and strife as simply incidental.

In the two great issues of the present campaign liberty and the constitution are involved. The Democratic party stands for the preservation of both. The Force Bill and the McKinley tariff are the issues; the former is no mere bugaboo to frighten voters, but an awful impending actuality, forged and ready to manacle freedom. The latter is already burning into the very flesh of groaning millions, in defiance of the constitutional provision that taxes shall be for government economically administered and for the general welfare.

With liberty subverted and the constitution violated, our government and the work of its founders become a failure and the dominion of a well administered monarchy is preferable.

Whether the shameful work begun shall be perpetuated is now the question, and its negative answer is found not only in voting for Cleveland and Stevenson, for that is only half the solution, but in voting for Compton as well.

County Commissioner L. I. Gillis Owings has suffered a sad bereavement in the death of a daughter, a young lady generally esteemed. Only those whose hearths have been visited by the fell destroyer can fully appreciate such affliction. Mr. Owings can be assured, however, that the sympathy of the entire county is with him.

Since Wednesday it has developed that Senator Rogers, of Howard, was being watched mighty closely by the newspapers as the possible center of interesting developments had Mr. Compton been unable to accept the nomination spontaneously tendered him.

The fining of a couple of colored toughs for boisterous profanity in a B. & O. railroad car a few days since was a case of the punishment fitting the crime.

WAS IT LEGAL?

A Question as to the Appointment of Supervisors of Election.

The legality of the appointment by Governor Brown, without confirmation by the Senate, of supervisors of election in the nine counties included by the last Legislature in the Australian ballot law is questioned in some quarters. It is contended that the Grovernor had no right to make the appointment without calling a special session of the State Senate to confirm them, and that to do otherwise will affect the validity of the coming election for presidential electors and consequently the electoral vote of Maryland. Those who oppose the Governor's action in the matter say that the appointments would be in strict accordance with the law if the offices happened to be old ones. As they were created by the last Legislature, the Governor has no authority, in their opinion, to fill the offices without the Senate's confirmation.

The same question is involved in the appointment of school commissioners, which is now being agitated in several of the counties, and it will probably reach the courts. The Governor made the appointments after an opinion from Attorney-General Poe that he had authority to do so. Mr. Poe says the Governor acted under section 11, of article 2, of the State constitution, which is as follows: "In case of any vacancy during the recess of the Senate in any office which the Governor has power to fill he shall appoint some suitable person to said office, whose commission shall continue in force until the end of the next session of the Legislature or until some other person is appointed to the same office, whichever shall first occur, and the nomination of the person thus appointed during the recess, or of some other person in his place, shall be made to the Senate within thirty days of the next meeting of the Legislature."

Mr Poe says there was a vacancy in the offices, although they were newly created and that the Governor had the same authority to make the appointments as if the offices were old ones. "The Governor made the appointments under the belief that he had the right to do so, in which view he is sustained by me," Mr. Poe added. "The calling of an extra session of the Senate would involve a heavy expense and the Governor asked me if it was necessary. I advised him that it was not, and that he could fill the offices until the meeting of the Legislature in 1894. In any event, the result will not affect the electoral vote of the State, as the electoral commission decided that you can't go behind the returns,"

Those who hold the contrary view say there was no vacancy in the new offices. They cite two precedents in support of their side of the controversy. These precedents are the opinions given by Attorney-General Gwinn to Governor Carroll in 1876, and the opinion given by Attorney General Whyte to Governor Jackson in 1890, both of which hold that it is necessary that appointments by the Governor to newly-created offices shall be confirmed by the Senate. Attorney-General Gwinn's opinion was in reference to the appointment of assessors, and in accordance with it Governor Carroll called a special session of the Senate to confirm his appointments. Attorney-General Whyte's opinion was in reference to the appointment of shipping commissioners. Governor Jackson declined to call the Senate together because of the expense. In consequence a number of acts passed by the preceding Legislature failed to become laws, as the Governor did not sign them, acting under Attorney-General Whyte's opinion that the appointments to be made would have to be confined by the Senate—Baltimore Sun.

Saved His Sight
Perhaps His Life.

Blood Poisoning After Scarlet Fever.

Read the following from a grateful mother: "My little boy had Scarlet Fever when 4 years old, and it left him very weak and with blood poisoned with canker. His eyes became so inflamed that his sufferings were intense, and for seven weeks he Could Not Open His Eyes.

I took him twice during that time to the Eye and Ear Infirmary on Charles street, but their remedies failed to do him the faintest shadow of good. I commenced giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla and it soon cured him. I have never doubted that it saved his sight, even if not his very life. And the case of my boy is not the only one that I know of where

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has accomplished a great cure I remain, respectfully, ABBIE F. BLACKMAN."

Hood's Pills are hand made, and are perfect in composition, proportion and appearance.

DIED.

THE TIMES,
ONLY ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.
Contains
ALL THE LOCAL NEWS.

ELLICOTT CITY, August 26, 1892.

Mars is in sight, but the millenium has not arrived as yet, although many of the overrated well-paid jobbers of memorized oratory say it's only a matter of time.

When the man who plays the boss,
Wants to sell or trade a hoss,
And will say you'll have to lick him;
When he runs he gets to kicking.
You can bet the millenium is near.

When the man who's got a pull,
Says this is not all-wool,
But in the warp there's cotton,
And from age it's getting rotten.
The millenium is just across the way.

When the lawyer fails to lie,
And the tramp refuses pie;
When the rich divide their wealth
With the broken down in health
You can bet the millenium is here.

THE ENTERPRISE, NO. 2.

The good out of the goodness of their hearts seek good for the pleasure of doing good. Motive is the pivot upon which all the evidence will turn in trying man for the deeds done in the body. Civil law is the offspring of man's ignorance of understanding. Law divine in ignorance and weakness, we stumble and fall. But those who from pure motives strive to mete out right no law can censure nor no Lord condemn. We seek your good will as well as your money. If an article is not as we represent it, it is your privilege to return it and our pleasure to exchange it or refund the money, as you may elect.

THE ENTERPRISE, NO. 2.

It is not always economy to put the least money in the poorest shoes, but the BEST SHOES and the least money is coming our way.

A shoe too poor to be profitable, to wear and sell is not the kind we sell.

The PLOW SHOES we sell for $1.00 is the kind others sell for $1.25.

We do not make 25 per cent. profit on your purchase. A trial will convince you the truthfulness of our assertions and you don't have to look on the map to find us. We are located directly opposite Odd Fellows' Hall and known as the LAMKIN ENTERPRISE NO. 2, where you will find a select assortment of Boots and Shoes for Infants, Children, Youths and Adults. Whenever you think of shoes or boots, think of Lamkin's low prices and fine fits for tender feet.

Respectfully,

THE LAMKIN ENTERPRISE NO. 2.
