JUDGE STEWART GONE.

A BALTIMORE CITY JUDGE WELL KNOWN IN HOWARD.

Removed From His Country Home at Ilchester, He Meets His Fate in Bultimore-Another Death in Baltimore The Local News Field,

Judge Wm. A. Stewart, of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore city, died Friday afternoon, August 26, about 4 o'clock, at his home, 205 West Lanvale street, Bal timore. The cause of death was kidneyand abdominal trouble and a general weakening of the system. He presided in the Superior Court Friday, July 1, and never set on the bench again.

The judge was confind to his home on West Lanvale street several weeks and Nebo, near Ilchester, Howard county, where he remained until about a week before he died. He began to sink soon atrength gradually failed until his death. J. F. Adams, J. F. Naylor, Daniel Don-Stewart, Jr., Mrs. Wm. A. Stewart, Jr., and his daughter, Miss Emily Stewart, were with him when he died. Judge Stewart was well-known to hundreds who did not meet him in his official capacity. His acquaintance in Howard county was wide from his spending his summer here, going to his duties in Baltimore from Ilchester and returning daily. His handsome country home commands a view of Baltimore harbor, more than eight miles distant as the crow flies. He was born in Baltimore December 7, 1825. He was a son of Joseph J. Stewart, who was of Irish descent, the family having emigrated from the North of Ireland in the early part of the last century. His maternal ancestry was from a family of French refugees who were driven from tion in the seventeenth century. The which was formerly one of the departments at the University of Maryland

He read law and was admitted to practice by the Baltimore County Court May 17, 1847. He was made chief clerk of the Frst Branch City Council in 1849 and held the office in 1850 and 1851. The election of 1851 placed him in the Legislature, and after serving acceptably as a member in 1852 and 1853 he was made chief clerk of the House of Delegates in 1854. The sessions of the Legislature while Mr. Stewart was a member were especially important, as they immediately followed the adoption of the State constitution in 1851. Although one of the youngest members of the House, he was very active and able, and was accorded a prominent position in the deliberations of the body. Mr Stewart acted as commercial agent for the republic of Venezuela at the port of Baltimore in 1852, during the absence of the counsul of that country. He con-

the ordinances and legislative acts pertaining to Baltimore and prepare a digest of the same. After the close of the war Europe, returning in 1867. He was reelected a member of the House of Delegates in the fall of that year, and upon the organization of the House in the session of 1868 he was elected Speaker. At the close of the session highly complimentary resolutions to his able and impartial manner in presiding were unanimously adopted. He was appointed one of the trustees of the McDonogh Farm School and fund by the Mayor and City Council on July 10, 1868, and for a number of years he was vice-president of the board. He was elected one of the judges of the Supreme Bench in October, judges election." The term is for 15 years, and under the system of rotation requir ed by the State constitution Judge Stewart has presided at different times over each of the six State courts of the city of Baltimore.

Judge Stewart devoted much of his time not occupied by his court duties in studying historical questions, and he was a member of the historical societies of Maryland and Virginia. He wrote many contribution on the history of colonial and revolutionary times in Maryland. He was a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church and was very active in church work. He earnestly supported the Sunday-school cause, serving as a teacher and superintendent and as secretary of the Protestant Episcopal Sunday-School Society of Baltimore. He was a church vestryman for many years, and was a lay delegate to the Convention of the Diocese of Maryland. The diocese was represented by him at the General Conventions of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia. Chicago and New York in 1883 1886 and 1889, respectively. Judge Stewart married Miss Emily G. Slaughter, March 16, 1869. He left a son, Wil liam A. Stewart. Jr., who is a lawyer, and a daughter, Emily Slaughter Stewart. One of his brothers is City Councilman Stewart, of the Fifth Ward of Balti-

Me was a member of St. Peter's Pro testant Episcolal Church, corner of Lanvale street and Druid Hill avenue, Baltimore, at the time of his death. He was for a long time one of the leading vestryman of Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church, corner of Broadway and Pratt streets. Governor Brown under the law wi appoint a successor to Judge Stewart to serve until the general election in 1893 In Governor Brown's term the mortality among the State judges has been unus ually great. Judges Goldsborough. Duffy, Irving and Stewart have died since Governor Brown's inauguration. The death of Judge Stewart leaves but one of the new judges elected in 1882 upon the bench. The only remaining one is Judge Charles E. Phelps, assigned to the Court of Common Pleas upon the death of Judge Duffy. The funeral took place Monday after noon at 4 o'clock from his home, 205 West Lanvale street Baltimore, Rev Dr Julius E. Grammer, late rector of St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church and at present assistant to Rev. C. George Currie, of Christ Church, Baltimore, read the burial service. Dr. Grammer was for years an intimate friend of Judge Stew art. The pall-bearers were William E. Hoffman, Dr. John R. Hooper, George Davidson, John Randall, Walter Stewart and J. A. Saulsbury. There were no honorary bearers. The body was buried

SENATOR PETER'S CRITICISM.

It Elicits a Reply from His Excellency, the Governor. Ex-Senator W. B. Peter, of Howard county, Friday of last week criticised Governor Frank Brown, of Maryland, through the columns of the Baltimore Sun, for failing to convene the State for the matress-makers' use. They go Senate to confirm the Governor's appointments of supervisors of election. Senator Peter said he had noticed a ding, of Govanstown, sell in the city and their native land by religious persecu- statement that Attorney General Poe ship about 2,500 tons a year. The price had advised the Governor that he had received in the public and private schools authority to make the appointments of Baltimore and was followed by a without the assent of the Senate under course of studies at Baltimore College, the constitutional provision for the filling of vacancies.

The ex Senator then proceeded to define a vacancy as contemplated by the caused a move in the market and large constitution, and cited opinions of At- wagon loads are being hauled down the torney Generals Gwinn and Whyte to show that no constitutional vacancies existed under the Act of 1892. Senator Peter expressed apprehension that the husks to market is the cost of hauling failure to convene the Senate to confirm | Only a limited number of farmers sell the Governor's appointments would affect the validity of the coming election in Maryland adversely to the Democratic | Everding says, they would not bring party and to the advantage of the fifty cents per ton. A year of high Republicans.

Governor Brown replied to Senator Peter in the Sun of Saturday. He expressed surprise at the criticism expressed and said:

"I understood some days ago that ex-Senator Peter was preparing an opinion upon the subject, but I thought tinued the practice of his profession and he would make himself familiar with the to the matress maker. In 1858 he was authorized to revise | ments are made, especially as the Governor's authority to appoint without the confirmation of the Senate is framed in words which were copied from the elect Mr. Stewart made an extended tour in | ion law of 1890. Mr. Peter was a member of the Senate in 1890 during the passage of that act, and my impression is that he was a member of the commit tee which reported the act to the Senate. "For the purpose of avoiding the ex pense of several thousand dollars, which results from the holding of a special session of the Senate to confirm the appointments, an unusual phrase had een introduced into the election laws of 1890, chapter 538, of the acts of that year. Section 166 provided that 'The Governor R. Johnson, of Battimore, for $8000, for shall biennially appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, if in ession, and if not in session, by the Governor alone, in each and every county of the State, three persons, etc.. who shall be styled the board of supervisors of elections of the respective counties.' Certain counties were except ed from the provisions of this act, which provided for the Australian ballot law. and the act of 1892, chapter 701, was in tended to extend the operation of the law to the entire State.

"Section 106, to which I have just referred, was repealed and re-enacted by chapter 701, acts of 1892, and the same phraseology was used concerning the appointing power when the Senate is not in session,. The act of 1892 was approved April 7, 1892, after the adjournment of the Legislature, and consequent ly the Governor is empowered to appoint the supervisors of election without the Senate confirming the appointments. "Mr. Peter states that 'the question arises upon the construction of what constitutes a vacancy', but the question does not arise upon the construction of what constitutes a vacancy. In prescribing the powers of the Governor article 2, section 10 of the Maryland Constitution provides 'He shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate appoint all civil and military officers of the States whose appointment or election is not otherwise herein provided for, unless a different node of appointment be presented by the law creating the office.' The act of 1892, chapter 701, does - prescribe a different mode of appointment of the supervisors of elections, namely by the Governor alone, when the Senate is not in session. "The ex-Senator, in citing the assessment act of 1876 and the opinion of Atorney General Gwinn that the assessors could not be appointed under that act by the Governor without the confirmation of the Senate, is not citing a similar case to the present one The office of assessor was created by the act, and furthermore, the law provided that the appoint ments should be made by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. If the assessment act of 1892 had been ap proved it was my intention to call: special session of the Senate to approve the appointment of assessors. "I am surprised that he did not see the arbitrary power of which he complains when he was a member of the Senate. and that power was bestowed upon the executive. Governor Jackson appoint ed supervisors of elections under that power, who served during the ensuing

In reply to the Governor's statements Senator Peter said: "I referred to the Senate's privilege of assent being de stroyed by the ballot law and the school law, and to certain dangers that might be incurred. Governor Brown has promptly set aside my apprehension in reference to the ballot law. I commend him for his safe action in being on the right side, and congratulate the people that there is no danger to apprehend from any informality in the law. He is quite right. I was in the Senate, was on the election committee, and reported the amendment he mentions. I did so beause I did not think that other than b minutes after noon Friday of last week | special legislative warrant the Governor had the right so to appoint the super visors. I recognized the right. I still Monday, September 5. While the old say, without that amendment he could board has not surrendered school prop-

The Market for Corn Husks.

The use of corn husks for the manufacture of matresses has grown to such an extent, says the Baltimore Sun, as to make a good demand for this product, which has hitherto been used as a cattle food. Husks from Maryland have a reputation all over the country for their superiority, and a large portion of the State's product is from Baltimore county. In the West the Maryland more, where the goods are made ready say it pays. to New York as well as to the West. The four or five dealers in husks in Baltimore, together with Mr. Herman Evernow paid for husks before preparation for use is $20 per ton, which is considered low for them. Last fall they brought as much as $35 per ton. A number of farmers who supply husks have been holding off for higher prices. The near approach, however, of the new crop has York road to the city. New husks require about two months for curing after being pulled from the corn. A large part of the expense of getting their husks, many preferring to use them for their cattle. If all the husks raised were sold for mattress manufacture, Mr. prices is sometimes followed by a year of large shipments that glut the market. As a consequence, the next year brings high prices, as few husks are then marketed, and few farmers save any husks from one season to another. The goods, especially when sent a long distance, are bailed. The buyers put the product into condition before it is sent

CLARKSVILLE, Sept. 1.—About three o'clock Monday afternoon a merry crowd gathered in this picturesque village to enjoy a straw ride to the romantic old gounds of "Carrollton Hall." The girls were first piled into the wagon then the baskets and last but not least.

Mr. Wade Clark was in the saddle and the start was made amid the sounds of laughter, horns and music. The parasols, fans and the red, white and blue trimmings of the team presented a gay appearance. On reaching the party's destination, after a survey of the grounds and buildings which were much admired the merry-makers were seated on the steps to enjoy an ample lunch. It was a tired though jolly crowd that repiled into the wagon to drive home in reached about nine o'clock and the old familiar strains of "Home Sweet Home" awakened the peaceful slumbers of those who had retired.
