FIRE EXPERIENCES.
KATE CLAXTON TALKS ABOUT HER MANY NARROW ESCAPES.
 She Says That She is Really a Coward Whenever She Hears the Cry of "Fire!"—Her Escapes Have Been Due to Extreme Coolness.
 For over fifteen years Kate Claxton has been pursued by a peculiar form of luck. In spite of the little woman's pluck, which has made her a heroine of several fires and a dozen or so of panics, she rather shrinks from the subject, and it with difficulty that she can be persuaded to tell of some of the escapes from the flames that she has had.
 Her experience at Harris' theatre, when the cry of fire caused a panic, is only one of the several through which she has passed since 1875, the year of the celebrated Brooklyn fire. She had just been dragged from the stage by La Franchet, the lag in "The Two Orphans," when a reporter sought her out. The excitement of the false alarm had left her nerves a little shattered, she explained. When reference was made to her apparent coolness she said that her manner showed nothing of what she really felt.
 "I was very much wrought up. No one can tell what that cry of fire meant to me. I had begun to think that my evil genius had forgotten my existence. I was so low spirited that I almost panicked. I was in an exceptionally good humor, and was sitting on the steps of the platform when the stampede began. As is always my first impulse, I rushed to see the flames. I did not doubt that the building was on fire, but I gave no thought, however, I saw there was no danger, except that which comes with every panic.
 "You know," she said, "that I dread a panic worse than I do a fire. My experience has been that more people are crushed to death in their efforts to get out than are ever burned alive. The escapes I have made, which some seem to think almost miraculous, were the result of coolness and presence of mind.
 When the cry of fire is given I never allow my impulses to run with the crowd to govern me. I imperil my life somewhat in order to seek out the danger and choose the best method of escaping from it. Often, it seemed to me afterward, had I followed the mad rush for the main exits I would never have escaped."
 "I try to impress everybody with the same idea. First view the situation and figure out the chances for escape. When the Southern hotel in St. Louis was burned, for instance, at which time twenty-seven lives were lost, I never did any of the remarkable feats which have been attributed to me. The story is generally believed that I rolled down the burning stairs in wet blankets. The fact was I stood in the burning building until I had discovered a safe means of escape. The fact that I was one of the last to get out caused dozens of reports to be spread.
 "My reputation as a fire fiend began the second year I acted in "The Two Orphans." I was playing in Brooklyn, I had thrown myself on the straw bed to sleep. I had closed my eyes, and for this reason did not discover the fire at first. When I was awakened and ordered to get up I saw the fire creeping along the top of the theatre. Every one remembers the fatal ending. Four hundred persons were burned or trampled to death, among whom were three of the company. The next year, 1878, I was caught in the St. Louis fire. Ever since then I have been considered a forerunner of fires.
 "I can only account for the numerous false alarms and panics from the fact that there are always some superstitious persons in the audience who, believing me to be followed by an evil genius, shout fire at the slightest provocation. More panics have been caused by fights in the streets and alleys than in any other way. Just a short time ago there was a panic in La Crosse, Wis., caused in the identical way as the one here. Another panic, which came near being a disaster, was caused by a street fight in front of the Owens opera house, in Charleston, S. C. When one starts it is impossible to check it. I have tried screaming to the audience, but it only makes it worse. If an audience often seems to check a stampede. At the close of the panic here I made up my mind to have me a big sign printed with the words, "It is only a fight."
 In only three weeks I have been without any one in the audience knowing it. I have become morbid on the subject of fire, and no matter how late at night it is, if an alarm is sounded I always dress and go. When the Fifth Avenue theatre, in New York, burned I was present and watched it to the end. If I had been seen it would probably have been said that my presence caused it. I do not deserve the reputation of being late in fires. I am a great coward, so great a one that it often troubles me to seem self-sustained. After such a fright an left completely unnerved."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Tragic Story.
 A Lewiston dog made a grave mistake Saturday. It is certain that "grave" describes it, for he died of mortification later and had to be buried. A little girl with whom he had been playing had a cracker in her hand which the dog greatly desired. She lifted it to her mouth to bite it, when the dog snatched at the morsel and not only got that, but the child's nose with it. The offense was too great to be overlooked and the police were notified and caught the dog. He was hitched to the back of an express wagon and started for the field where he was to be shot, but before arriving he dropped dead. The police say that the very thought of what he had done was more than he could bear, and he accordingly decided to depart this life by the easiest way he knew.—Bangor Commercial.

No Footmen for Open Carriages.
 Many women of fashion discard the footman on the box of a victoria; the second man presumably exists to open a carriage door, and as this service is not needed in a victoria he becomes a superfluous man whom it is quite as good form to leave at home as to take. One of these horse victorias, though often seen, has seemed suddenly out of place.—New York Times.
